Olivetians produce fusion: New paths, warm reactions

Energy

This year scientists found novel ways to produce energy. Chemists claimed to have demonstrated "cold" nuclear fusion on the laboratory table top. The controversy still rages, while scientists continue to experiment their control over the same energy which drives the sun and hydrogen bombs.

Nuclear fusion occurs when two nuclei from hydrogen atoms merge to form a heavier atom. Since nuclei are positively charged they repel each other. Extremely high temperatures and pressures overcome this natural resistance, and the nuclei collide, releasing radiant bursts of energy.

Individual elements (people) fuse to produce explosive results.

Elements

When freshmen first arrive on campus they are expected to adapt to college life. Forces within and without drive them to a type of fusion. They fuse into the new lifestyle by combining necessary elements from each part of their being. As they progress through college, students find the right combinations, drawing from their spiritual, mental, social, physical, and individual resources. Other people stimulate more complex combinations, often producing explosive results.

Reaction

Nuclear reactions are becoming more easily controlled than human reactions. Each person's reaction to outside forces like temptation or competition depends upon his inner resources combined with those of significant others (i.e., friends, professors). Sometimes the subsequent reactions are slow and deliberate. Sometimes they are spontaneous and send ripples of energy through the entire campus.

The campus structure moves, flexes with the new arrival. The CAC, when finished, will not only service the students physically, but spiritually, mentally, and emotionally.

Balance

Opportunities, choices, balance.... College activity appeals to all parts of the individual, encouraging involvement in spiritual life, academics, social life, organizations, and athletics. In four years a student could easily experience each of these facets of university life. Decision making becomes crucial, and choices are made based on individual well-being. Absolute involvement or complete negligence in all of these areas upsets balance. Each complements the other. The right choices and the proper combinations lead to true education.

Dedication

Yearbook For Gordon Wickersham

The Aurora staff chose to dedicate this year's book to Rev. Gordon Wickersham for his years of service in publicity and recruitment at Olivet. In addition to his many other duties, Wickersham has advised yearbook staffs several years since 1967.

When Dr. Leslie Parrott became president of Olivet in 1975, the Publicity Department was added. Dr. Parrott asked Wickersham to be Publicity Director due to his excellent work as Director of Student Recruitment.

Besides advising yearbook staffs, Wickersham is responsible for the production of The Olivetian, the school catalog, the directory, the application and admission forms, the stationery and envelopes, and the flyers concerning department and sports brochures. Wickersham also directs the publication of programs for various convocations and commencement exercises.

Since 1975, Wickersham has worked to upgrade the publicity office with new computer systems, printers, and darkroom facilities. "I want to stay on the cutting edge on how to do a job better," said Wickersham.

Born and raised in Binghamton, New York, Wickersham graduated from Olivet and Boston University, then attended Nazarene Theological Seminary, where he met his wife, Marva. The Wickershams took their first church assignments in Aransas Pass and Harlingen, Texas. For the next eight years they pastored churches in Texas, Indiana, and Illinois.

In 1960 Wickersham became the Alumni and News Director for Southern Nazarene University, then moved to Olivet in 1972 to work in student recruitment.

In the fall of 1975, Wickersham became Director of Publicity. "No matter how close we are to deadline, he stays composed," said Shelly Comstock, Aurora editor.

Wickersham was most proud of his work on The Olivetian, saying, "I feel putting together news like The Olivetian is as sacred a responsibility as preparing and preaching sermons. It's an image of what I believe God is doing on this campus." By Teresa O'Brien and Paula Osborne

New Energy

President Leslie Parrott Encourages Fusion

"Fusion" is an atomic age, hi-tech word associated with nuclear power. Fusion has the potential for incredible new energy which will someday light our cities and warm our homes. Our Aurora Editor, Shelly Comstock, is right: This kind of positive fusion is what goes on at Olivet.

For instance: "Fusion is a melting together." This is what happens on campus each new year. Each year, every student moves ahead. No one is what we were. In college, no one can stand still. Besides classroom differences, there are cultural differences, and differences in the mind sets. But elements in these differences are melted together in commonly shared goals of learning, Christian values, and the acculturation process. In Olivet everyone is in the melting pot.

Another factor in fusion, according to Webster, is "the union of different things." The idea of fusion is a great symbol for celebrating 50 years on this campus. In 1940, Nazarenes and Catholics in this village mixed like water and oil. In the next stage we accepted each other with suspicion. Then came greatly reduced tensions and finally the "Service of Reconciliation." The union of differences in this community is a lesson in fusion.

Also, fusion means "blending." We are not alike on this campus, nor should we be. We are denominational in our commitment but ecumenical in our spirit. The academic garden that grows is nurtured by watering, pruning, and cultivation which recognizes the elemental differences in individual plants. Our goal is not to reduce the garden to identical plants, but to help each person be themselves within the constraints of what the garden can assimilate.

And finally, this lesson from the dictionary includes that part of the definition which says that "fusion is the state of being united." We are united in Christ in whom there is neither Greek nor Barbarian. We are united in our Olivet liberal arts tradition which is salted down with educational programs designed to help prepare us for life in the marketplace. By Dr. Leslie Parrott

Man is a social animal. And college provides one of the more climactic social environments. Living quarters are so tight that an anti-social lifestyle is nearly impossible. From the first moment on campus, students are subjected to social situations — cruising the quad, eating cafeteria style, and attending support groups. Freshmen fuse into these new social settings and develop their individual social behavior, distinguishing them from their peers over the next four years. Many students rely on their mental, physical, and spiritual resources to form their personalized social conduct. Students then customize and refurbish their social behavior through peer interaction — roommates, classmates, friends, cliques, and dates. After four years of social activity, students should graduate with a polished social standard of behavior. But like the physical body, the social life is unpredictable. Students will leave both socially polished and scarred — still rough on the edges.

ID: Don't Leave Home Without It

People around the world use identification as a means from getting from country to country.

Here at Olivet, we used our laboriously laminated card as a sort of sophisticated meal pass. Yes, our ID suffered through every Marriott meal that we did.

Then, after dinner, our meal pass became a library card, with bar code. This transition was hardly noticed by the card.

There were some Olivet students who stretched their ID to the extremes and used their cards creatively.

Some students tried to use their ID card as a credit card to charge bills. A common saying heard from a person negligently waving their ID card around was, "Just put it on my bill."

Others turned to the darker side of use for their card. Yes, when a key was lost and a student was locked out of his room, he produced his ID card in the hope that he could unlock his dorm room door with it.

Others found that if a cop stopped them, it was less painful to hand the officer their ID card than their license. The cop might pity the students and let them proceed, with only a warning not to travel over the speed limit next time.

As you can see, ID cards weren't just used for identification purposes — they had many personalities. By Cheryl Harris

Ollies Follies

Seniors victoriously prove class dominance

As usual, the class warriors met the first day of Ollies Follies on the battlefield of the traditional sporting events. The classes met in flag football, softball, and volleyball.

Then came the "special" events. Those goofy, little games consisted this year of a tug of war, a pyramid building contest, a water balloon catch, and the infamous jello relay.

To end the weekend festivities, the annual skit and talent show was Saturday night. Each class had to perform twice for a panel of judges.

Leading until the evening's activities, the Juniors had to give way as the Seniors took over the skit and talent show. As a result, the Seniors had seized first place, with the Juniors falling into second. The Sophomore class settled for third, while the Freshmen went home, sadder but wiser, in fourth.

The senior attitude about Ollies Follies is that it is one of their last chances to show their "class dominance." Steve Sykes remarked, "I thought it was only fitting that the senior class enter the annals of Olivet history with a victory at Ollies Follies."

Derek Mitchell summed up the tradition behind Ollies Follies when he said, "The freshmen aren't really sure yet what to expect out of Ollies Follies. Ollies Follies is something to look forward to and expect." By Dana Ingram

ONU Dating

After months of dreaming, you're finally going out with that special person. When the fateful evening arrives, panic strikes you. After all, the impression you leave on your first date could lead to either adoration or alienation. So how do you create a good first impression? Here are a few tips from Olivet students.

Steve Carlson suggested avoidance of messy food. "Don't go out for pizza, spaghetti, or barbecued ribs," he advised.

Bruce Whitteberry added the practical tip, "No matter what happens, keep a positive attitude. . .and wear deodorant."

Being "real" is important on a first date, according to Paul Baker: "Don't try to impress; just be yourself." Baker also pointed out that, "If (she) doesn't like you on the first date, there won't be a second one."

Chris Bledsaw's advice showed shrewd judgement of male character. "Spend at least an hour getting ready. Then all you have to do is nod, smile, and say 'uh-huh' a lot, and he'll think you're funny, sensitive, and a great conversationalist."

Perhaps the wisest advice on making a good first impression came from ONU sophomore Jim Pardew.

"Keep your hands to yourself," he stated.

Fright Night

Trick or treating isn't just for kids anymore! Students brought back memories of childhood by trick-or-treating through the dorms on Friday, October 27.

The guys were able to visit the girls' dorm first between 7-8 p.m. Some came dressed as bowling pins and a bowling ball, and punk rockers.

At 8:15, the women turned the tables and invaded the men's dorms in costumes such as cavewomen, martians, and mummies.

Whatever the treat, students headed back to their dorms to survey their loot with their friends.

The annual all-school Junior-sponsored Halloween party took place the following evening.

"They are a big help in making the party a success," commented Junior Class President Sherry Fortado about the Rosenblooms, who offered their farm to use for the seventh year in a row.

After the students arrived at the farm they wolfed down hot dogs and warmed their insides with hot chocolate. After the Halloween feast came the traditional hayride.

Ethan Reedy said he received a rush of adrenalin while bobbing for apples as he plunged his head into the icy cold water amidst the crowd chanting "Ethan! Ethan!"

The evening ended with the film "The Ghost and Mr. Chicken" starring Don Knotts.

Making Things Happen

Fresh Ideas And Cool Thoughts

"See the city, hear my roar!"

This nonsensical phrase was the battle cry of frustrated Social Committee members. When the work at hand was at a standstill, some member would put down their work and yell this saying. Strangely enough, after warbling the statement back again, the committee would fall again to their work harder than ever, encouraged by their unity of voice.

One might wonder where this statement came into being. During Social Committee Retreat at Camp Kearney the second weekend of October, the group was trying to come up with a Christmas Banquet motto. This was suggested and kept, not as a banquet slogan but a saying that would last all year.

This meager slogan proves that the Social Committee of 1989-90 was dedicated to being different and innovative in all areas.

Derek Mitchell, Vice President of Social Affairs, said that his goal for the year was to "make things different, so (that) people would remember them."

Mitchell said, "We are not here to bring the same events we have year after year. We are here to lead the student body down paths to new experiences."

1989-90 was a year of "fresh ideas," as Mitchell would say, and cool thoughts. These two were components that were always thought of as the committee was planning an event. One such example of this reasoning was the Christmas Banquet theme "Cool Yule" — a slogan that had never been tried before.

Homecoming Elegance

On the evening of November 2, Chalfant Hall was transported back to the Victorian Age. The stage area featured an elevated carriage and a park filled with plants, dotted with lamp posts and benches, and completed by a gazebo.

This was the setting for 1989 Homecoming Coronation. The candidates for Queen were: Melissa Apple, Sheila Stark, Lisa Stiles, Pam Stouder, and Joy Wood.

"My first thought was 'No way!'" admitted Homecoming Queen Melissa Apple. "I didn't think I would make it to the top ten, and after that, I didn't think about it."

The coronation was organized by WRA President Deann Hedrick, who worked hard to make the evening memorable to all who attended.

The candidates were then escorted by Mark Bishop, Kerry Hand, Chris Jones, Wes Clark, and Derek Mitchell.

Coach Larry Watson, Master of Ceremonies, presented each member of the court, giving background information about each princess. As each candidate walked down the runway, pre-recorded messages from their parents were played.

1988 Homecoming Queen Dena (Williams) Reams took her final walk down the runway during special musical numbers by James Laymon and Lance Delbridge.

Memorable Homecoming

"Homecoming" took on another meaning in 1989 — one that went beyond football games, barbecues, and concerts. This year's Homecoming, commemorated in the Homecoming chapel, kicked off a year-long celebration of the 50 years Olivet has experienced in Bourbonnais, Illinois.

The excitement continued throughout the activity-packed weekend. It officially began on Thursday night with the coronation of the 1989 Homecoming Queen Melissa Apple in Chalfant Hall.

The remaining two days were filled with activities and events, some traditional and some new. The football game on Saturday, November 4, was particularly exciting when Olivet beat the Little Giants of Wabash College 42-28, assuring the Tigers of the first winning season they have had since 1982.

One of the "traditional" activities, the Homecoming Parade, was not held. Alumni Director Brian Allen felt it would have been unfair to have the students put in so much work, only to have the parade cancelled because of the weather, as it has been the past couple of years.

Not many students noticed the parade's absence, however, especially since the weather for most of the weekend was cold, windy, and overcast.

One thing they couldn't miss, though, were the new decorations on nearly all the buildings. The most eye-catching was the two-story tiger's head that covered the quad-side entrance to Ludwig Center. The wooden tiger was painted by members of the Art Club. Other decorations included banners on major buildings.

The closing concert on Saturday night was also exciting. Along with all three choirs, the band, and the orchestra, several Olivet alumni also performed, including tenor Jonathan Welch, who brought the crowd to their feet with his animated delivery of "If I Were a Rich Man" from the musical, "Fiddler on the Roof."

Every Homecoming is memorable because it is Homecoming. Homecoming 1989 was no different, and will indeed hold a special place in student hearts. By Teri Cline

Starstruck

The lights dimmed as shadows made their way across the stage. A swell of applause could be heard as MRA President Kerry Hand sounded off Lip Sync '89, providing enthusiasm, variety, and a chance for students to forget the pressures of academia.

The MRA sponsored activity consisted of several groups who competed for cash prizes to a variety of music, ranging from Patti LaBelle to George Michael.

First place went to "The Howe Boys," who performed Today's "Got My Eyes On You." An overwhelming crowd pleaser, the act consisted of Scott Brower, Vince Robish, Mike Lingle, Scott Lingle, and Neal Leatherman.

Winners of the second and third place spots were the Black Sisters of Olivet for their performance of Patti LaBelle's "New Attitude," and a striking duo by the "act" Milli Vanilli with "Baby, Don't Forget My Number."

Jason Eaton, a.k.a. George Michael, stated, "I have an ultimate dream of being a rock star someday. This is probably as close as I'm going to get."

Chicago:

An Adventure

Chicago. The Windy City. For many Olivet students, it represents a sort of haven away from the humdrum of classes, papers, professors, and more papers.

Chicago can be a fun and interesting city to visit, especially if you're going there for the first time. But if you decide to spend a day there some weekend, beware — it can also be a land fraught with more danger and peril than was ever faced by Indiana Jones and Batman combined!

Simply arriving in Chicago in one piece can be an adventure in itself. It is amazing that a highway that might only have one of two cars for hours can suddenly become gridlocked simply by passing the sign that reads "Chicago City Limits." And native Chicagoan drivers are schizophrenic by nature; they become raving lunatics as soon as they get behind the wheel.

Once you've made your way into the city, there's the little matter of finding a place to park. You think finding an empty slot in Ludwig is tough? Try driving 10 stories up into one of the downtown high-rise parking facilities, only to learn there are no parking spaces.

Travel brochures always make a point of reminding you that Chicago has something for everybody, and that's certainly true. But if visiting such landmarks as Sears Tower, Water Tower Place, Wrigley Field or the many fine museums and galleries aren't your cup of tea, that's still no problem. Chicago has a multitude of happenings, marches, concerts, plays, etc.

All in all, visiting Chicago can be a lot of fun - an experience to remember. By John Small

A Cool Yule

The success of the events sponsored by this year's Social Committee came through a unified consciousness of fun and dedication to innovative entertainment. The committee's purpose in providing opportunities for fellowship stems the philosophy of providing quality events for others.

Derek Mitchell, Vice President of Social Affairs, commented that "the strong sense of unity that the committee had this year really made us comfortable with each other. We had a good time when we planned the banquet."

"I believe that our success with the Christmas banquet this year was due to the atmosphere which we cultivated at our retreat. Through unifying activities we got everyone involved, and no ideas were turned away," Nick Christofferson said.

The idea for the Christmas banquet theme of "Cool Yule" came from Linda Dunbar. "We heard Mrs. Dunbar whisper Cool Yule at the retreat. We knew in that moment that we had found our theme," Melissa Frye said.

Along with the unusual theme, the committee decided to take the banquet to new heights of creativity. This was accomplished by extravagant decorations. The cafeteria was decorated with bare branched trees draped in white lights. The centerpiece of the main dining room, after guests walked through an arch of lights and pine branches, was the green and white tree of lights.

"A Cool Yule" was celebrated with a banquet in Ludwig Center and followed by a Christmas program given by First Call. "In the past they (Social Committee) have always used entertainment from the Olivet community. This is the first time they have used outside entertainment," said Mrs. Linda Dunbar.

The banquet was dedicated to Dr. Kenneth Armstrong, chairman of the Business Division, for "his high academic standards, outstanding ministry, and active involvement with his students," Mitchell said. By Derek Mitchell and Cheryl Harris

54th "Messiah"

Choral excitement on December 1st and 3rd built around the 54th annual performance of Handel's Messiah at College Church of the Nazarene.

The choir was a combination of the majority of the choirs on campus, along with volunteer vocalists from the community. Olivet's orchestra accompanied the choir.

"I had never tried out before for the Messiah. It was exciting being chosen to be a soloists. I felt like it was a really great experience for me. I wasn't really nervous," said Sheryl Veldhuizen.

This year's student soloists were Sheryl Veldhuizen, soprano; Tori Tremaine, contralto; Neal Woodruff, tenor; and Dave Dubois, bass. They sang in Friday night's presentation. The music faculty held auditions and selected the soloists.

Guest soloists Elizabeth Futrell, soprano; Marcia Meyer, alto; Stephen Gould, tenor; and Prof. John Reiniche, bass, were featured in Sunday evening's performance. "It was a neat experience to hear the expertise of the professional soloists," said soloist Neil Woodruff.

Staff, students, family, and members of the community all turned out for this annual event. "The support the community gives us by attending the Messiah every year is great," said Lisa Harris.

The Messiah has become a tradition and a major part of the Christmas season and spirit not only for Olivet but for the surrounding area. By Melissa Frye

A Break From The Norm

Each year Olivet tries to bring to the students some good Christian entertainment to offer a break from the norm of classes, studying, meditation, and Red Room scans.

Thus, 1990 started out with a Friday night concert by Steven Curtis Chapman, sponsored by the MRA.

In this concert, Chapman said that his goal was to be on the level of the students in order to minister better. According to Sharon Conn, he did this. "He was young enough to be able to relate to us," she said.

The First Call concert, held as post-Christmas Banquet entertainment, was the largest concert success of the year. "I enjoyed First Call and so did everyone else. They were full of enthusiasm," said Natalie Steube.

In 1989, First Call was named the best Christian artists of the year. The Olivet concert was unique in that it was the last performance that they would be together as the original group because lead singer Melody Tunney found it necessary to pursue other options in her music career.

First Call sang several different styles of music during their performance. Beth Willsberg said, "It was more than singing, it was a ministry to them." By Melissa Frye

Blackout Blues

The effects were insidious. (A pretty startling way to start out an article, I know, but I needed to stress that the effects were really bad.)

Oh, there wasn't a worldwide famine, or a massive protest against food poisoning. Instead, the effects were more subtle. People missed class.

To most college students, missing class because of a natural disaster is a very, very, very good thing, as long as the campus remains on the ground. But, missing class during finals week because of a blackout was tragic. (Prof's tend not to believe that excuse too many times.)

Olivet was subjected to two such natural disasters, the cause still unknown. (Yes, there were rumors of a power line down somewhere in the depths of Kankakee, but it's hard to hear things firmly from inside a glass bubble. It echoes.)

As a result of these temporary power shortages, many students, due to electronic alarm clocks, missed class, lost term papers, wore wet clothes, and the like. Each student had an interesting tale to tell about what they were doing when the lights went out.

Ryan Myers just happened to be typing on a computer. "I was just putting the finishing touches on a twenty page paper on Genetic Engineering when the blackout hit. I lost everything!" he moaned. "So I went to a manual typewriter and, by candlelight, typed the whole paper from memory."

Nick Christoffersen used the blackout as an excuse to stop studying. "I said, 'Great! I can quit studying! What a plus!'"

The blackout made some students more determined to get things accomplished. Shelly Armstrong said, "We drove to Kankakee to find a fast food restaurant with the lights on to get French fries. Then we brought them back, sat under the emergency lights and ate them."

Melissa Frye complained, "I was doing my laundry and all my clothes were wet. I was supposed to go out, so I went out with wet jeans. I froze!"

Despite all the problems that the blackouts caused, they will always remain a semi-pleasant memory in the minds of Olivetians. I know I will always remember where I was when the lights went out. By Cheryl Harris

Breaking Away

Impulse — shadows rush the car, waves of relief pour over wearied souls, shouts storm the air! Why all the hype? These are typical reactions as ONU students break away from studies, stress, and strife, to do the "hangout scene."

Believe it or not, the social lives of Olivet students did not always revolve around the dinner table at Marriott, or Rook in the Red Room, or late-night pizza bashing in the dorm. Some students went to the extreme — walked the edge, passing beyond the fenced walls to find excitement elsewhere.

Local hangouts for students, such as Donutland, Denny's, and the Kankakee State Park, provided students with much needed "space," a chance to daydream, and a time-out from flaring busy work.

Hanging-out was a true psychological need for most students and an essential part of leading a well-rounded academic life. Sophomore Lisa Brenner stated, "For myself, the State Park was an alternative to the typical Sunday afternoon naps."

Other Kankakee hot-spots included: TCBY, Chicago Records, Chicago Dough, Little Professor Book Store (as well as the entire Meadowview Shopping District), and Gala Lanes (really?). By Marvin Adams

Test Pressure

The pressure and panic that comes with taking exams is common to all college students. How do ONU students cope with this stressful menace?

The night before she takes a test, Susan Unger said that she relaxes by studying with a friend. According to Unger, studying with someone who also has an exam the following morning helps relieve feelings of despair and doom. "Misery loves company," said Unger.

Other students worked themselves into a frenzy the night before a test and then slept it off after the exam. "I try to relax and not worry too much," said David Magry. "And then I'll crash afterwards."

Ron Walls said that he fights exam stress by not waiting until the last minute to study. According to Walls, planning ahead helps him not to get caught in a jam the night before.

While a student at Miami University in Ohio, History Professor Vince Arnold said that he ran six miles a day. Arnold said that exercise is as effective in reducing test stress as being overprepared the day of the exam.

If studying with a friend, working hard the night before, and exercise happened to fail as methods for test stress relief, then ONU students often did what Dave Anderson suggested: "Seek help from the Almighty." By Greg Watson

Extremities

In 1989-90, ONU students grew together, yet retained intimate qualities of individuality. They knew when to stand together and when to stand apart. Some say change is what makes the world go around," the same goes for diversity. Without it, there would be only simple-minded clones wearing headdresses of mediocrity stating, "Pick me, I'm like all the others." Yet, Olivet students remained diversified, while united through Christ.

In areas of music, food, entertainment, and clothing, tastes ranged from one extreme to the other. Some good, some bad — who's to say! The Aurora staff went to the extremes of campus, seeking out 20 diversified tastes, 20 separate individuals from "each walk of college life." These three lists are what they came up with. . .By Marvin Adams

Nightlife

Dorm life was synonymous with night life — late night life. Students settled down to the faint rumble of the next-door neighbor's stereo, and a large Domino's pizza beside them.

Dorm life was much more than getting three or four hours sleep, it was a way of life. Students had the opportunity to share, to relax, and to have some much needed privacy. Many friendships were formed during pseudo-study parties that helped to carry the weight of college stress.

Bill Cleveland said, "I thought I'd get tired of living in a dorm. I enjoyed the socializing, pranks, and late night pizzas with my friends. Dorm life is a vital part of one's education as a whole in developing 'people' skills."

Lisa Brenner agreed. "I really liked it. It gives you a chance to know other people to share and to compromise. I chalk it up as a good experience." Dorm life has contributed to many life changing experiences, preparation for life, and in dealing with future relationships successfully.

What can one really say about dorm life, besides laughter, love, pizza, and friends? Dorm life proved to much more than sleeping and studying. It was an essential element in building the characters of the students of 1989-1990. By Marvin Adams

Thinking people sometimes go to college, sometimes they do not. Universities do not have a monopoly on the intellectual elite. Just because you happen to be a college student, doesn't mean you actually use your brain. But for the sake of higher education, let's pretend each student here at the university expends an ample amount of brain power. Even this ample amount of thinking energy requires resources from the physical and spiritual parts of the individual. And true learning does not occur when the student refuses to interject his personality or his experience into the new influx of information. Unless the student draws on all parts of his being — the spiritual, mental, physical, and personal — his learning is reduced to memorization or dull rote. This is not a piece of propaganda designed to motivate students to learn. This is common sense that each thinking person has already proven true. The fusion of all assets of the individual in learning will lead him from one stimulating discovery to another.

Business

The Business Division was divided into three separate departments: Accounting, Business Administration, and Home Economics. To have been a part of the division was to have felt the strength in expertise and care for learning that each professor provided.

The strength of the division lay in the diversity of the faculty. They each brought a different view and theory concerning the national economy and our responsibilities.

Despite their individuality, the faculty shared a common vision toward academic and Christian excellence. Prof. Don Engel said, "It's tough to find a group that works together better than we do."

The students also played a vital role in the division. "It's not enough to sit through a lecture. . .there must be an aggressive hunger for excellence," said Dr. Mike Weise.

Field placements and special projects often satisfied the students' hunger to learn. Prof. Shea, Chairman of the Accounting Department, agreed that learning goes beyond the classroom. He said, "Accounting is best learned by doing."

Two students who took

Prof. Shea's advice were Leslie Hanna and Shelly Armstrong. Hanna used the field placement option and acquired hands-on experience at Armour Pharmaceutical's accounting department. Armstrong put in extra time on a special project for the Accounting Department.

The key to the department's success was to approach education with little bias and to allow the student's mind to function freely under instruction. With the current leadership, this success should continue for many years.

Business Clubs

The purpose of the Business Club was three-fold. First it provided valuable learning experiences through various activities. Several times each semester professional men and women spoke to the club on such varied topics as: interviewing techniques, merger-mania, and secrets to success as a Christian entrepreneur.

"The speakers that the Business Club brought in to speak provided me with more information about what is happening currently and what to expect in the future," said Brian

Scott. Jolene Earles especially enjoyed a speaker who discussed employers interviewing techniques. She said, "This really helped me to understand interviewing techniques that I will be faced with within the next year."

The second purpose of the club was to help the members find opportunities in their prospective fields. John O'Brien said the activities had made him "...more aware of the countless options that are available to me within the Business Department."

Last, the club was founded for the fellowship of like-minded individuals in the area of business. Throughout the year the 100-member club sponsored activities like pizza parties, movies, a game night, devotionals, and topped it off with the annual Business organization banquet.

Pam Stouder, ASC President, strongly believed that the Business Club was an excellent organization for its members. She said that "...it is a good example of what a club should be for its members." By Tim Hildreth

History

"Why study history?" A typical history class opener. And in response, students and professors offered varied opinions.

According to Duane Omev, a senior history major, "The study of history enables one to avoid the mistakes of others, so that consequential learning does not become a hindrance."

Students majoring or double majoring in history and/or political science chose to pursue a variety of career options. Senior David Anderson planned to attend law school, while Junior Don Schultheis hoped to eventually teach in secondary schools. Chrystal Phelps, a history and business major, planned to enter the corporate world.

Professor William Isaacs and Professor W. Vincent Arnold taught the majority of history and political science courses. They included classes such as Modern European History, Renaissance and Reformation, Russian History, Totalitarianism, and U. S. Foreign Policy.

"One reason I chose History was to have Prof. Arnold. His classes seem important to life, but I really won't know that until I graduate," said Shelly Comstock.

Most history majors also belonged to the International Historical Honor Society, which Prof. Arnold reintroduced to the department in 1988. Phi Alpha Theta members received several benefits for their participation. Initiations took place in the spring for those who met requirements. By Greg Watson

English

STOP! Back Up! Don't look now, but there's a huge adverbial clause in the fourth paragraph. No! No! No! Watch out. On the left, there's an improper tense. Wow! That was close.

It's the 24th paper of the semester, due in approximately 1.5 hours. It's 6:00 a.m. One more page to go. A heavy coffee buzz pulses through the brain.

Many students have chosen this lifestyle by pursuing a teaching or non-teaching degree in the Department of English.

New Department Head, Prof. Judith Whitis, led a team of part-time and full-time faculty, who taught a variety of courses, such as Journalism, Linguistics, Creative Writing, and American/British Literature.

Students could be involved in the English honor society, Sigma Tau Delta. Founded in 1962, the society's Greek letters stand for sincerity, truth, and design. Design is considered an integral part of literature, language, and composition.

The motto of the society reflects its purpose: "I shall endeavor to advance the study of the chief literary masterpieces, to encourage worthwhile reading, to promote the mastery of written expression, and to foster a spirit of fellowship among students specializing in the English language and literature, ever keeping in mind our international motto — sincerity, truth, and design."

Their activities included sponsoring on-campus films, Christmas caroling and decorating, and attending a Shakespeare play in Chicago. This year's chapter of Sigma Tau Delta was a group that sought to serve its members and enrich them through activities outside those that were strictly academic. By Marvin Adams and Karen Johnson

Modern Languages

Why would anyone want to learn a foreign language? Doesn't everyone speak English? Why should I sit in a classroom where a foreign language is spoken?

"It's fun to be able to communicate with people from other countries, to learn something about them and their cultural differences," said Prof. Val Schuller, professor of German. Born and raised in Germany, Schuller taught this year in the Modern Languages Department, along with Prof. Minnie Wills in Spanish and Dr. Vicki Tryong in French.

The modern language program made learning a foreign language rather painless. Classes went out to authentic restaurants to enjoy one another's company and fine food or to watch foreign films.

One of the highlights of the language department was trips abroad each year. Usually the students traveled to Spain or France in alternating years. This year, however, Canada's French-speaking Quebec was chosen as the spot.

Occasionally, some students study abroad for a semester before graduating from Olivet. This helps incorporate all that has been learned in the classes — both the language and the culture.

The department offered a romance language major, concentrating in Spanish and French. Many times students combined this major with another major or minor in business, social welfare, or education, thus increasing their job possibilities for the future.

So why did students sit in a classroom where a foreign language was spoken? They wanted to understand and communicate for themselves, opening the doors to new possibilities. By Christina Wilkins

Communication

The Speech Communication Department, located on fourth floor Burke, was one of the strongest in the school. Communication majors boasted the department's skilled faculty and challenging courses.

"Dr. Kale (Division Head) is excellent. He challenges you to integrate what you learn in class into your life," said Senior Sheila Gullickson.

Other professors were Dr. Larry King, Prof. Angela

Latham-Jones, and Dr. Henry Smith, Department Head. "The professors are all well mastered in their fields, and their standards are high for all the communication students," said Communication Major Eddie Adams.

Melissa Frye, sophomore communication major, said the professors were each good in their field. "They blow you away sometimes in class. They treat the students as equals, but keep their respect."

Students gave various reasons for choosing the communication major. Pam Stouder said the major was very diverse. "In every area you go into, you need communication skills for the people you deal with."

Senior Missy Apple said, "I chose communications because I enjoy working with people. I like the performance studies, especially the acting." By Melissa Frye

Education

"It is important that teacher education students think of themselves as part of a collective professional organization. I think SEA allows that organizational structure," said Dr. Steve Pusey, faculty advisor of SEA.

Students who were an active participant in teacher education discovered this through being included in the Student Education Association.

The Club, founded twenty years ago, worked on becoming exposed to student involvement this year. One major purpose of the club was to inform student teachers about the situations that they were never told about in their methods classes.

Trudy Van Patten said,

"We want to help students find the answers they don't get in the classroom."

Through various activities such as lectures, selling carnations, and sweatshirt sales, SEA fully involved its members, mostly education majors. Harold Wood said, "SEA is an exciting program that develops you into a good teacher."

Student Teaching

The soldier stands in stillness and looks toward the horizon. A chilling wind stings his face. He sniffs the dark air and squints. He realizes the battle will not be easy. With a sigh and a heavy shrug, he starts off for the hills.

Sound like a script for a Vietnam War movie? Believe it or not, this image describes the feelings many student teachers have at the beginning of their assignments.

For 12 weeks, these students take on the responsibilities and activities of a full-time teacher. Naturally, this results in a mixture of excitement and anxiety.

Cheryl Harris, an English education major, said, "Student teaching makes you feel very vulnerable. You have to open up to all your kids."

Steve Sykes, a fellow English major, shared Harris' fears, "It's an enormous responsibility. You feel as if you are determining the future of 150 kids. It's like their entire future rests on your shoulders."

David DuBois viewed students teaching with more optimism. "I feel that the experience will give me the chance to practice teaching without the pressures a real teacher feels, like keeping their job," he said.

Matt Brown, a music education major, was excited about student teaching. "It will give me a chance to use all the information I've gained over the past four years."

Student teaching can indeed seem like a battle at times. However, with Olivet's Education Department equipping them, student teachers are armed and ready for victory. By

The Art Department, according to Prof. Greiner, "is improving by doing more with the resources it has." This year the department, headed by Dr. Harvey Collins, added more computers, water based media, and visiting artists into the art curriculum.

Greiner noted that the last two years the art students were talented. They had the opportunity to participate in the Art Club as well as take classes.

The Art Club was a blend of students taking art as a major and those who were interested in art as recreation. The club believed that talents were to be used in service.

Senior Monica Robbe said, "The Art Club at Olivet has helped me to get acquainted with other students who have some of the same interests as mine, and it has also been a way for me to grow secure with my ability as an artist and the career choices I have made."

In October, the club invited editorial cartoonist Ken Stark from the Daily Journal to speak and offer suggestions to those interested in pursuing a career in this particular field. The club also sponsored a Halloween party in October.

November brought the members together to work on the banners which graced the campus for Homecoming, as well as the massive tiger which stood at the entrance of Ludwig Center.

The times together watching art videos or attending the Art Institute in Chicago were chances for the members to share ideas and talents, as well as spiritual joy. Junior Jim Pardew said, "The Art Club combines two things I love... art and fun!"

Music

The Music Department provided the music major and minor with the essential tools to have a successful career in the music world.

The Music Department at ONU enjoyed a reputation of strength and quality among the eight Nazarene colleges and universities. The chairman of the department, Dr. Harlow Hopkins, expanded the department through funds garnered from alumni and department budgets.

Olivet offered three music concentrations: church music, performance, and music education. "Music will always be a part of whatever I do... in youth ministry or music ministry," said Dean Keefauver, Christian education and church music major.

Joy Wood said the program "introduced me more to the world of classical music.... I have developed my skills through exposure to all types of music and performing them." Joy also said, "When I sing the words and believe them, that makes me feel good."

Not everyone in the department planned to teach. Sarah Lowry planned to become a homemaker. Sarah, an accomplished pianist and clarinet player, said, "I enjoyed traveling in Lifesong and Concert Band, yet I still want to settle down."

Kevin Becker, also an accomplished musician, set goals in other areas beside music. Kevin felt that there were many possibilities for him, such as sound engineering, video production, and studio work. Kevin said, "Individuals have shown me what I could have, and what it was going to take to reach that point.... The music I produce is a reflection of the individual personality the Lord has given me."

In many ways music has broadened and invigorated our lives in whatever areas we have chosen to work. By Dan Cox

Nursing

Incoming nursing majors are usually surprised by the difficult four year program. Sophomore Rebecca Jenkins said, "Nursing is a difficult program, but it is rewarding. It takes a lot of dedication to make it through."

Although the major was difficult, there was much excitement in the classroom, lab, and activities. Most of the nursing activities were sponsored by Nursing Students in Action (NSA).

The purpose of Nursing Students in Action (NSA) was to provide unity among the nursing student body.

It also strove to provide functions that were representative of current professional interests.

NSA sold first aid kits as a fundraising activity in the fall and hosted 25 health care agencies during a Nursing and Health Career Job Fair. Senior Michelle Fryman said, "Due to the nursing shortage, new graduates are really at an advantage for jobs. The job fair helped us to shop around to see which hospital best suited our needs."

A Christmas party in the warming house was a time for students join in some fun and food. Sophomore

Kim Schride said, "Celebrating my favorite holiday with my nursing friends was topped off by caroling to the elderly in a nursing home."

Among other activities, the club produced a style show for those involved in health careers. They studied the professional way to present themselves learned more about the professional art of dress, hair, and make-up.

The club also sponsored a health Fair, where concerned people learned more about current health issues, such as AIDS, diabetes, cancer and nutrition.

Biological Science

"Home away from home away from home." This is what Reed Hall of Science was to most science majors. Being a Biology/Zoology major meant many stressful hours of studying, researching, and experimenting.

A very important part of a science program was the instructors. They loved to teach, especially science. They cared about each student as an individual and wanted to help them grow in life as well as in science.

Junior Jennifer Osbo said, "I appreciate the professors interest in helping me to become a better person."

Senior Bob Miller agreed that overall their personal interest made the Science Division that much better.

The Biology/Zoology faculty included Dr. Richard Colling, the department chairman, Professor Beaney, Dr. Robert Hayes, Dr. Randall Johnson, and Dr. Robert Wright.

Through these classes and others, the students in this major grew to appreciate each other. It was very common to see groups of students gathered as they try to work together to understand theories and procedures.

Junior Biology major, Linae Kendall said, "There is a comradery among science majors, a special bond."

Every science course includes a good lengthy lab. Olivet's labs gave practical experience and were helpful when trying to get along as a scientist in the "real world."

Miller stated that the department "has helped me to prepare for the future."

Pre-Med

What does it take to get into medical school? It requires commitment, a high GPA, good MCAT scores, involvement in extracurricular activities, and a solid foundation of science knowledge in chemistry and biology.

Seniors who pursued medical school included Steve Roat, Bob Miller, Cathy Poole, Shawna Newhouse, Tomoko Komori, and Liz Duff. Others who sought graduate school included Kirk Knotts, Emily Pisha, and Stephanie Birkey. Pam Leerar will continue her studies in physical therapy, while Hemah Ingle will attend medical technology school.

These students spent hours in lab, which contributed to friendships. Cathy Poole said, "The time we have spent in the lab has provided a great opportunity to get to know each other. There is a lot of interaction."

In the Chemistry Department, Dr. John Hanson was the head, and other professors included Dr. Larry Ferrren, Dr. Doug Armstrong, and Dr. Robert Hayes. These men worked together to provide a variety of different classes in chemistry.

All the pre-med majors had either a major or a minor in chemistry. The laboratory experience and background knowledge was an invaluable tool for future experiences.

Has the Chemistry Department been effective in preparing students for medical school? We will know in a few years... as we inquire among the medical doctors who started their career with a science degree from Olivet Nazarene University! By Liz Duff

To the surprise of many students on campus, Olivet does have an Engineering Department. Students can now stay at Olivet and earn their B. S. degree in General Engineering.

Professor Mike Gingerich, Chairman of the Engineering Department said, "An engineer has the responsibility of applying emerging technologies and the experience of the past to meet the needs of man."

This year the first graduates from the Engineering Department received their degrees. Senior Dan Davidson said, "The program has given me a broad foundation of knowledge and problem-solving skills in a variety of areas. I feel prepared to go into almost any field and do well."

The Engineering Club completed its third year of active duty. The club's purpose was to exemplify God, the One who engineered the wonderful universe in which man thrives.

Phil Parke described the club's purpose, "To publicize the fact that there is an engineering department at Olivet."

The club attempted to provide opportunities for its members in preparation for the real world by attending a seminar on graduate schools at Argonne National Laboratory.

They also attended the National Design Engineering Show, which exposed students to the leading edge of technology in their field.

The reasons for joining the club ranged from self-preservation to financial reward. However, Byron Rigg said, "In the short time I have been involved in the club, I have seen many changes and much growth. The club reflects the growth of the department. It, like the Engineering Department, should become a major factor in campus life...." By Stephen Carlson and Tracey Spaulding

Geology

How can they find rocks so interesting? Actually geology is more than just rocks. It is the study of the planet earth: the formation, the alteration, and its material.

The purpose of the Geology Department at Olivet was to train competent students in the field of geology. Dr. Al Fleming said, "I teach because my students will make an impact in terms of the environment. They have the potential of playing an integral part in the solution of major world crises."

Geology majors could expect an interesting and varied course load. These courses included intensive lab work, research projects, and adventurous three day field trips.

The faculty and students were actively involved in research. Senior Jim Crichton, under the direction of Dr. Fleming, located geological source areas for chert, which local Indians used in making arrowheads. Senior Bruce Whitteberry, supervised by Department Head Dr. Max Reams, studied carbonate and phosphate deposits.

Field trips also offered students the training and field experience necessary for the competent geologist. Geology major Sharon

Lopez said, "Field trips are a great way to learn about geology and they help me notice features I've never seen before."

The most important variable in the Geology Department, however, was the instructors. They not only held a high standard of achievement for the students, but they respected them as well. Geology major Scott Schoenwetter said, "The professors know what they are doing and how to get the point across. The work is tough, but it's worth it! I think?"

Astronomy

This past summer some very important events took place in the skies above. On August 16th, a total lunar eclipse occurred. Also in August a small spacecraft named Voyager II flew by Neptune. What is so important about this "fly-by" is that we learned more about Neptune and its moons in that short, one month fly-by than we have ever known before.

In 1977, when Voyager II was launched from Earth, most of us were in elementary grade school. In 1979, it passed by Jupiter. Saturn was the next destination. Voyager arrived at Saturn in 1981, about the time we were in junior high school. Voyager's third encounter was with Uranus in 1986, and we were walking the halls of our high school.

As Voyager II made its journey through our solar system, computer technology on Earth improved. Controllers were able to re-program the spacecraft, improving its ability in information storage and transmission. Finally, this past August, Voyager II encountered the aqua-blue world of Neptune.

Strickler Planetarium received a 15 minute program on Voyager II's encounter with Neptune. The brief program consisted of beautiful photographs of Neptune and debuted on campus in late October.

The student operators were Pamala Hamman, Cheryl Harris, and Brock Schroeder. All three were excited about presenting the program with the latest information on Neptune in Kankakee area.

Pamala Hamman remarked, "Every time I sit at the control panel, a sense of awe fills me. I feel close to God. The newest show, "Voyager II at Neptune," has shown again his wonderful creation." By Brock Schroeder

Religion

Religion majors came in all shapes, sizes, hair color, and clothes. The stereotyped religion major, with a black suit and short cropped hair, was rarely seen on campus.

The required religion courses, however, changed little. Freshmen religion majors still had to take Old and New Testament and the Fundamentals of Christian Ministry. Ultimately, before graduating, the student spent a semester in field training.

During their time at Olivet, most religion majors joined Ministerial Fellowship, an organization intended for students preparing for full-time Christian service.

To Senior Deron Matson said Ministerial Fellowship was "a beneficial organization for the support of ministerial students. It gives students with like interests a chance to meet together."

Activities included a Student Mini-Revival in the Quad, a trip to Nazarene Theological Seminary, a spring banquet, pulpit supply work, speakers, and informal parties.

For the first time, the club, under the leadership of Division Chairman Dr. David Whitelaw, published the Olivet Theological Journal. Religion major Tom Miles said the journal "has been one of the most exciting projects Ministerial Fellowship has undertaken this year."

According to Senior Tonya Digby, "Ministerial Fellowship is a good program which helps to expose religion students to various issues." One goal was to help students implement the academics of the classroom into the practices of the ministry.

The organization's theme was, "run with perseverance the race marked out for us" (Heb. 12:1) so that "all who come behind us find us faithful." By Troy Stoneking and Tim Phipps

Computer — Math

This yearbook's editor assigned a story to a mathematics major about the Math Department. She wanted the article to include information about the professor — student relations, difficulty of classes, or reasons the students decided on a math major.

Ironically, the writer chose to submit a poem about his experience with math and numbers. The piece was too abstract for a journalistic yearbook article. But it did prove that at least one math major on this campus did not constantly think systematically.

Some people still think math majors cannot think creatively. These people obviously do not consider the creative energy that goes into defining a complex geometric formula. So here's to math majors and their creative (and logical) minds.

Although computer science is a major separate from math, the two were dependent upon each other. The Computer Science Department expanded under the strong direction of Prof. Larry Vail and

Prof. Cathy Bareiss.

The computer science courses were not a walk in the park. They required hours of programming and debugging. Each new course was like learning a foreign language.

Countless hours spent staring at a computer screen often caused blurred vision. But the professors spent extra time with students, which resulted in graduates who understood a trade marketable in today's computer age. By Michele Robbins and Buck Stimson

Psychology & Sociology

Burke Ground Floor housed the Psychology and Sociology Departments. Psychology and Sociology continued to be popular majors taught by well trained and esteemed professors.

Under the direction of Prof. Mike Lareau, the social welfare major drew more students, and one motivator was the Social Work Club.

The club's name was "Diakonia," which in Greek meant service, contribution, help support and ministry. The purpose of the club was to inform the members and others in the community about current areas of human need. Michelle Crary, a social welfare major, said, "The Social Work club provides an outlet for me to join others in helping people."

Activities the club provided over the year included bringing special speakers in the area of social work to the meetings once a month. The club also conducted a shoe drive, designed to help put shoes on the feet of the homeless in Chicago.

Ken Tueck said, "Through the Social Work Club I felt I could do something to change the world or at least make a difference."

The club had fundraising activities and encouraged information distribution in social welfare areas. Mark Lingle, a social welfare senior said, "The club is very informative and gives it's members a practical, realistic aspect of what social work is all about."

Club membership was open to anyone interested in the purposes of the organization. According to Crary, "As long as there is a need to help people, there is a need for the Social Work Club!" By Rose Hertzberg

Lines, seen and unseen, supposedly separate our spiritual, physical, and mental selves. Many of us let other people draw the lines horizontally and vertically around and through us. This is your spiritual self, and this is your thinking self. Dangerous. Without tripping into a theological discussion, especially in an evangelical school yearbook, let us consider these imaginary lines. What separates our mental self from our metaphysical self; our personality from our spirituality? Maybe the lines are complementary, not parallel or perpendicular. Maybe our spiritual faculties need our mental resources, as our mental faculties need our spiritual resources. This is not very profound. But this fusion concept is sometimes forgotten or overlooked. It is too easy to tip the balance.

Spiritual Life Council

"Join the Team!"

"I have enjoyed serving on the Spiritual Life Council," said Christi Fulwood, director of the Spiritual Gifts program, "because it has given me the opportunity to show others how to use their abilities for God." The Spiritual Life Council tried to live up to their theme this year: "Equipping students to serve others."

Each position on Spiritual Life was important and no task was menial. Spiritual Life Secretary Andrea Chenault, said that the council "has been a great opportunity to serve the Lord while serving students."

Brock Shroeder, director of Outreach Ministries, said that "being a leader on the Spiritual Life Council has given me the chance to see what God meant for a leader to be, a servant."

Many students learned that serving God in a ministry position could begin in college. Corey Jones, director of Evangelists, said, "I've enjoyed the Spiritual Life Council, because it has given me the chance to minister while working on academics."

Yet, even for some people, being on Spiritual Life Council was an eye-opening experience. The director of the Sunshine Club (childrens ministry), Tim Gantz, said that "it's increased my awareness of the spiritual needs on campus, and there are more needs than what is assumed."

Many students found satisfaction was serving God through one or more of the many ministry opportunities, whether it was Evangelists, Omega, Lifesong, Outreach, Sunshine, Operation: SALT, Ministerial Fellowship, or Prayer Band. By Chris Jones, Vice-President of Spiritual Life

Students Enjoy Chapel

Two days a week just aren't enough to attend chapel at ONU, according to students and faculty. A chapel service gives a time "to commune with God" and enjoy "the preaching, singing and prayer," an Olivet professor said.

Chapel allows students to set aside their books and block out their problems. "Chapel is a set time each week that reminds me Who is central in my life," said Senior Brian Barlow.

Chapel speakers often point out areas in student's lives that God might want to alter. Without chapel, said Senior Don Schultheis, "I would probably miss out on many areas of my life that God might want me to change. Chapel is important to Olivet and its students."

Students and faculty had the chance to listen to many fine guest speakers during the 1989-90 school year. Many of these guests were well-known Olivet alumni, yet others were not.

Jean Alice Small, editor and publisher of "The Daily Journal" of Kankakee, received the fourth annual Maggie Sloan Crawford Award in a Nov. 1 chapel. "In the 1990s, this wonderful school will continue to prosper and grow," said Mrs. Small. "It is truly a jewel in the crown of the community."

St. Viator's College, a respected school which existed on Olivet's campus from 1868 to 1938, was honored on Nov. 15. Dr. Joseph Nielson, Chairman of the Social Science Division, helped to arrange this service with Fr. Robert Carey, former pastor of Maternity BVM Catholic Church. By Greg Watson

Students Take On Omega And Lifesong

Omega Productions consisted of three traveling groups which presented the Gospel and its Biblical truths through drama. This was Sherri Schock's fourth year in Omega and second year as director.

Attending various churches, youth groups, and retreats was Omega's primary activity. Lee Hathaway, a returning member, said he enjoyed staying in the homes of families he visited last year. "The people made us feel welcome and served us excellent meals," said Hathaway.

Brent Turner, an Omega

leader, said, "The most incredible part of the ministry is listening to the teens and remembering how I was, and what I was going through at their stage in life."

In addition to traveling on the weekends, Omega performed in chapel and prayer band before peers. Shane Foster, another Omega leader said, "It is easier in a way to perform in front of friends, because I can relate to the pressures everyone is going through."

Reflecting on the importance of Omega's ministry,

Schock said, "It is time we as Christians realize the power of drama and utilize it for God's glory."

Lifesong was another organization which traveled to churches, but their mode was music. Phil Parke, director of Lifesong, said, "It's hard to witness to people one on one. Lifesong gives me the opportunity to share my witness and love for Christ in a way that I feel confident."

Fourteen groups traveled, each led by a captain who called the practices and scheduled the engagements. Group

Captain Andrea Chenault said, "Practices tend to be more than just getting together singing. The people in my group are so encouraging." Traveling together created friendships.

Like Omega, Lifesong ministered on campus and in the community. Estuardo Mazin, second year member, said, "It has helped me realize the importance of Christ's command, 'Go therefore to all people.'"

On Tour With Public Relations

Idolized by teenagers at youth camps and respected by their peers on campus, members of public relations groups lead such a rough life. In truth, group members were practically worked to death touring all summer and traveling school weekends.

The Olivetians, a mixed singing group, and the Master's, a men's quartet, represented the university this year in churches located throughout the educational region.

The members not only use their musical talents but their interaction skills as well. Quartet member Brent Cunningham said, "Not everybody you meet on the weekends is easy to converse with. My position forces me to improve my communication skills."

After entering their PR group, members soon discovered the job demanded sacrifice. Troy Comstock, member of the quartet, said, "Many people think PR is no work and all fun. The fact is, even though it is one of the most rewarding jobs a student could have, it takes a lot of work and time."

Olivetian member Jon Klavohn considered the experience worth the sacrifice. He said, "You meet a variety of people when you're on the road, and each person has had a part in forming my outlook on life. It has been an experience I wouldn't trade for the world." By Michele Robbins

Students Escape to Form Band-Aid

Prayer Band. . . "It's just some extra services during the week," some might say. However, to many people, Prayer Band provided encouragement, support, and a chance to share not only praises but also personal concerns with fellow students.

Chris Jones, Vice President of Spiritual Life, said, "Prayer Band has been an opportunity for students to forget about school for forty-five minutes and to focus on God."

On Tuesday and Thursday evenings students gathered in Kelley Prayer Chapel to sing, testify, and enjoy the ministry of selected musicians and speakers. Rusty Gray, On Campus Ministries Director, assisted Jones by taking the responsibility of scheduling the speakers and special music.

The speakers shared challenging devotional thoughts, inspiring others to focus on God. Jones said, "I have been truly blessed by the testimonies of my fellow students. They share their praises and their hurts, and I have been able to rejoice and cry with them."

This time of sharing was followed by one of the highlights of Prayer Band: testimonies. Senior Tony McCoy said, "I love Prayer Band because the students stand up for testimonies and speak from their hearts."

Prayer Band provided a ministry involving many people, giving them a chance to share their talents as well as what was on their minds. Julie Benjamin said, "(I like) the testimonies and (hearing) how the Lord has helped them."

Prayer Band may be summed up by the words of the Apostle Paul in Romans 15: 5-6, "May the God who gives endurance and encouragement give you a spirit of unity among yourselves as you follow Christ Jesus so that with one heart and mouth you may glorify God. . ." By Julie Pickett

Inner-City Work Inspires New Perspectives

God used thirty committed people who were willing to take time out to help others on the second annual Work and Witness trip to the Shepherd Community Church of the Nazarene on October 20-22. Not only was much accomplished at the mission, but people in the group learned a lot about each other.

After we traveled three hours to Indianapolis, Friday night included an introduction and tour of the mission as well as a time of games and fellowship. We spent time learning each others' names and getting to know each other better. (Did you know that Ethan Reedy is also known as Fifi?)

Saturday proved to be a long day of working. The work projects included building walls, cleaning out the day center, painting, library organization, weather-proofing the parsonage, building shelves, and neighborhood work.

One group was able to assist a community lady in moving to a better home. Shawna Newhouse said, "It was fun helping in a one-on-one situation."

Others made puppets and held a program for the children in the park.

Christina Wilkins said that the time spent with the individual kids was one highlight of her weekend. She added, "It was a growing experience to work with what was available and make a difference in the lives of these kids."

Tracey Spaulding was excited as five new children came to Sunday school the next day as a result of their work with these kids.

As we went to Union Station on Saturday night, we were challenged to witness to at least one person by using a survey sheet. Through our survey, we were able to spread the gospel of Jesus Christ.

We returned to Olivet on Sunday after church and many vivid memories. Lisa Powell said, "It was good to see how the other half lives. It also makes us thankful for what we have!"

Others felt reaffirmation of their calling to work in an inner-city setting; at the same time, some realized that this was not what God had in mind for them.

Students Experience Third World Reality

Lifetime memories were started May 9 at 2:45 a.m. when Dr. Kale and sixteen students left for an unforgettable work & witness trip to Guyana, South America.

Cathy Poole said that her experience was "awesome. It was good...because we saw many different things in Guyana."

They stayed at the District Center located at the Georgetown Church of the Nazarene in Georgetown, Guyana.

Domestic chores such as "washing laundry for many people, all by hand, was a challenging experience and made me appreciate the luxuries I so often take for granted," Paula Laun said.

Poole said that the best part of the trip was the people. "They were really friendly...One best part was worshipping in their services and the fact that we were able to see a different part of the body of Christ."

"They were very under-supplied in all types of materials ranging from important medicines, I.V. equipment and blood pressure cuffs to sheets and cotton balls," Stutzman said, shocked at what she and fellow nursing majors had seen at a local hospital.

They were overwhelmed by the feeling of worshipping with Nazarene American Indians at Goldhill Church of the Nazarene located in the jungle.

The Guyanese Christians exhibited an intense zeal for the Lord. Bob Miller thought that the worship services were interesting because the "Guyanese were really enthusiastic."

The prospect of leaving Guyanese friends was heartbreaking.

Miller added, "It was (an) eye-opening (trip). You often go with the purpose of helping people out...I was helped by the people there in Guyana."

As the last wing of the journey ended at O'Hare International Airport on May 23, the team realized that their lives would never again be the same.

Poole said, "It's hard to put it (our feelings) into words because we experienced so much in so little time. It left me with the impression that because they have so many needs that I needed to meet the needs of the people here, too."

Muscles, nerve cells, and will combine to produce movement. One element cannot work independently of the other. Crossing finish lines, returning serves, and tagging bases require fusion of bulk strength, mental quickness, and enduring spirit. Athletes spend hours polishing these essential elements until ready to sport their abilities in competition. Challengers test quality by roughing edges and spoiling unity. Since his fused skills are versatile, the experienced athlete adapts to the competitive disorder. Collegiate sports demand this type of maturity and understanding of the unified elements of motion.

Soccer Takes Play On The Road

The ONU mens soccer team had an improved, but disappointing season. Although they did not reach their goal of a .500 season, the team gained experience. Coach Larry Cary said, "Even though our record does not show it, we had a number of close games which could have improved it a great deal. Although we're losing four veteran players, we have a real young team and our future looks very bright."

The season started well with a win at the Grand Rapids Baptist Soccer Tournament. This was the first time the soccer team had beaten Grand Rapids Baptist, and Mike Boven was named tournament MVP. ONU also took second in the Mount Vernon Nazarene Tournament by beating Mt. Vernon 1-0 in a very wet and physical game.

Much of the team's difficulty was attributed to the high number of road games. Senior Rob Miller said, "I think the whole team was tired by the end of the season with all of the traveling we did. And in those games at the end it was evident in our flat play."

Much of the team's success was due to first year players, 10 freshmen and two sophomores, who made tremendous contributions. "Since we were a young team I think we had some problems due to inexperience, but next year we will have matured and our season will show it," said first year player Scott Brower. The team's consistent success at home was due to the great fan support displayed by the students. By Rusty Gray

Men's Tennis Sees Bright Future

It was not one of the better years for Olivet's Men's tennis team. Although there were some individual bright spots, the Tiger's never found the needed overall consistency. Coach Jeff Schimmelpfennig attributed this to inexperience. He said, "We had a young team, who were not used to the level of competition they were up against every day."

However, Schimmelpfennig was extremely pleased with several of the Tigers' individual performances, especially his second singles player, Scott Lingle. "Scott has improved every year since he has been here. He really puts a lot of time into his game during the summer," Schimmelpfennig said. Lingle placed second at both the KCC Invitational and the NAIA District 20 playoffs. His second place finish at the Districts was one of the highest by an ONU player in many years.

Sophomore Kerry Hand, who played third singles, also brought a bright spot to the season. "Kerry came off a very good Freshman year and had to make a big jump from sixth to third singles. He was our most consistent player behind Scott." Junior Don Moran also contributed. Others who showed potential were Freshman Mike Lingle and Sophomore Neal Leatherman. "Mike and Neal both are very capable players once they find more consistency in their game," Schimmelpfennig said.

The two lone seniors were Jeff Whiting and Jeff Lingle. Both had successful careers and both played all four years. Although it wasn't their best individual years, they were a big help to Coach Schimmelpfennig and the younger guys.

Whiting and Lingle played first and fourth singles respectively. Rounding out the '89 squad was Freshman Mike Knight.

"Overall it was a good year when we look at the experience we gained by playing the tough schedule. It will pay off in the upcoming year," Lingle said.

Women Send Rackets Smashing

This year's women's tennis team was a young and inexperienced one with only two returning starters. The team finished the year with a record of 2-8 but definitely had more ability than that.

Senior Brenda Miller, in her fourth year starting at first singles and first doubles, finished her last season with a record of 6-4 in both. Tori Tremaine, a junior transfer from Point Loma Nazarene, played second singles ending with a 4-6 season, and teamed with Brenda Miller at first doubles. Miller and Tremaine ended their doubles season at Districts, finishing in second place.

Andrea Green played third singles and finished with a 500 record. Andrea also made it to the finals at Districts, but took second place as well. Kelly Tucker, the other returning player, had a good season at fourth singles and at second doubles with Andrea Green.

The other Olivet players Kristen Brahm, Kara Clerc and Lisa Harris played fifth and sixth singles and third doubles. None of the three had much experience, but they had a positive attitude and improved over the course of the season.

"Hopefully most of the players will come out again next year and there will be a lot more experience," Miller said. "It was a fun season and the team got along great." B. Brenda Miller

Winning Season

The ONU Tigers entered the season with the highest expectations ever. With 133 players on their roster (the most ever), Head Coach Dennis Roland turned to his 15 returning seniors to provide the leadership for a positive winning season.

The Tigers started by winning their first two games against Lakeland and Greenville at Ward Field.

After the Tigers ranked 15th in the nation in NAIA Division II, the football program gained respect and recognition locally and nationally.

The offense also received national recognition. Averaging 377 yards rushing per game, they ranked number three in the nation in NAIA Division II for yards rushed per game.

The Tigers also broke 21 single game or team season records. When running the ball, they were top of the class. Greg Huff played another record shattering year, holding every Tiger record except one.

The defense was more aggressive than ever. "When we're on and into our game, our defense can be hard to handle," Coach Kim Raynor said. They forced 34 turnovers (interceptions and fumble recoveries), scored 20 points and blocked three kicks.

Some teams choose to overlook special teams but the Tigers placed great emphasis on them. "Special teams is the third phase of football," said Coach Don Revell. "They helped us win games."

Football, continued

One of the highlights of the season came at Homecoming. The Tigers shone by beating Wabash College with a 42-28 convincing victory in front of an enthusiastic crowd.

Another milestone the Tigers reached was a winning season, the first since Coach Roland has been the Tiger head coach. The Tigers finished the season with a record of 6-4. "The seniors set the pace," Roland said. "It was the best senior leadership since I've been here."

With experience as the best teacher, the seniors led the way to establish ONU as a quality football program. Pioneering the way from a locker room that barely held 75 players and a 2-8 season, the seniors have helped bring the program to a successful and respectable status. By playing aggressively, yet displaying class, the seniors helped lay the foundation to a successful program. By Dan Chitwood

Tigers Turn To Serve

The 1989 Volleyball Season was far from dull for both players and fans. Coach Brenda Patterson welcomed one of the best recruited teams to Olivet.

Valuing their vision for victory, pursuing the positive, and promoting unity was stressed in team meetings. The Lady Tigers worked well together in trying to achieve team goals.

With only one senior, three sophomores, and eight freshmen, the team was one of the youngest in ONU history. In all, nine of the 12 members played college volleyball for the first time. Despite inexperience, they played with confidence and determination.

The lone senior, Cathy DeFries, who made the NAIA District Team, was a good role model for the younger players.

The Tigers were unable to win as many games as they wanted to. However, in terms of talent, they rivaled any other team in the league. The coaching staff noticed improvement as the season progressed.

No "I" In T-E-A-M

The men's cross-country team was a close knit group and began the year with many goals. One was to qualify for the NAIA National Meet. Led by Senior Tim Hamman, they placed first in the NAIA District meet, qualifying them for the NAIA National Meet.

"The men's team showed remarkable improvement throughout the season," said Coach Ray Kuhles.

This was the first year in Olivet history that there has been a full women's team for the entire season. After prayer, before each meet the team chanted, "T-E-A-M. There's no 'I' in 'team.'" Through sweat and tears, the women stuck together.

The team consisted of three seniors: Tammi Williams, Pam Leerar, and Sheila Dabbs. According to Kuhles, "Tammi's career was outstanding."

Kuhles said, "Pam's leadership was not only shown by the races she ran, but she proved her leadership in the classroom." Leerar was named an Academic All-American, and Williams was named NCCAA All-American, District Champion, and NAIA National Qualifier.

The women finished in the top five as a team in all but two races. The fifth place team finish at the NCCAA National Meet showed their determination despite illness and tough competition.

Kuhles said, "I enjoyed being with these young men and women. They were not only accomplished athletes, but they also endeavored to be better Christians." By Tammi Williams

Student Work-Outs

Just walk around campus around 8:00 or 10:00 each evening, and Olivetians dressed in sweats will be heading for their places of exercise. Although many students worked out in the mornings and afternoons, the gym and outdoor track were busiest when the sun went down.

The campus offered students many options for exercise. The tracks inside Birchard Gymnasium and outside in Snowbarger Park were perfect for a quick morning or evening jog. Birchard housed two weight rooms where students received instruction and had equipment for muscle training.

Aerobic classes and intramural sports were also provided for students interested in regular physical activity. Senior Elisa Roberts maintained an exercise routine. "I enjoy doing a combination of work-outs, like running, lifting weights, and aerobics, for variety," said Roberts.

Junior Jeff Pettit also lifted weights. He said, "I exercise, because society pushes for fitness." Freshman Carol-Ann Abraham said she runs and lifts to keep her body fat down.

Some students exercise for reasons beside appearance. Junior Neal Woodruff said, "I believe you cannot be a truly well-rounded person if every part of you isn't in tune with the other."

Senior Shelly Comstock said, "Running is mental, not just physical, therapy for me. It clears my mind. That's when I compose most of my papers." By Michele Robbins

Packing The Pit

The Tigers had a lot to live up to following last year's record breaking season. Last year they won the CCAC Championship and the NAIA District 20 Title, which sent them to Kansas City for the NAIA National Tournament.

Jeff Prather, the Tiger's second all-time leading scorer, will be missed. However, the Tigers had many capable players and experience. It was a new season for the Tigers. Coach Hodge felt this year's team could be as good or better than any past team.

The front line, composed of Seniors Steve McCarty, Scott Hollywood and Jeff Hodge, were backed up by Juniors Warren Brent and Ronnie Malloy.

Juniors Mike Carr and Kent Chezem filled the guard spots. Sophomores Derrick Breland and Shane Davis backed them up.

This year's conference and non-conference schedules were challenging. The New Year's Hawaii trip was a highlight.

Fan support was once again incredible. There was something special about the last season for "packing the Pit." Taken from Mike Frey, Kankakee Daily Journal

Key Elements In Successful Season

Lady Tigers Fuse

Experience, hard work, team effort, and first year coach Robin Glass were key elements in the Lady Tigers successful basketball season.

On the floor, team members were quick to action. Utilizing the talent of this solid, but young, group of players, the team got off to a great start, progressing quickly throughout the season. "It is exciting to watch them work together and see them grow athletically and in other ways," said Coach Glass.

The Tigers used Philip-pians 2:2 as their theme verse emphasizing unity of spirit and purpose. Seniors Cathy DeFries, Carrie Dorsey, Mindy Shelburne, and sophomore Candace Lahr led the team as a strong nucleus of returning players. The remaining members of the team were made up of three juniors and seven freshmen.

Throughout the year Coach Glass stressed that spiritual growth was more important than winning, but felt the team could easily win districts. The Lady Tigers opened their season on November 18th against Illinois Benedictine College.

They won the NAIA District 20 Championship, the NCCAA Division 14 title, and finished fourth in the NCCAA Nationals in Tennessee, with a record of 23-10. By Tori Tremaine and Adam Lange.

Tiger Wrestling: Continuing the Tradition

Continuing the tradition was the motto of this year's wrestling team. The team's goal was to win their fourth consecutive NCCAA national championship, and finishing in the top 10 of the NAIA, and they did both.

The Tigers started out the season with lightning force, competing against colleges of all sizes from the University of Kansas and the University of Wisconsin at Stevens Point, to Wright State and the University of Toledo.

The team traveled extensively over the Christmas break, competing at the Midwest Classic in Indianapolis and continuing through Ohio with a total of seven matches in five days.

They were hungry to maintain their standing of seventh in the NAIA, which took them back to Anchorage, Alaska, to wrestle the number six team, Alaska Pacific.

Although it gave the matmen a bumpy record, ONU's toughest ever wrestling schedule improved the confidence of each wrestler. Tim Smith said, "Wrestling is a self-gratifying sport. It humbles you when you get beat. But it only serves to motivate you to do better the next time."

New Decade For Tiger Baseball

At the dawn of a new decade, the Olivet Tiger Baseball Team hoped to make their mark in the NAIA. The Tigers were ranked 27th in the NAIA pre-season poll.

With an experienced team and the acquisition of key players, such as catcher Paul O'Callaghan from Oklahoma State and pitcher Scott Wambsganes from Western Kentucky, the Tigers hoped to start their climb to the Top Ten. Eventually, they wanted to reach Lewiston, Idaho, the site of the 1990 College World Series.

The Tigers were led by senior captains, Trent Eshleman, Lewis Hansen, and Darren Davis. Eshleman said of the upcoming season, "If we pull together as a team and have strong performances from key players, we are as good as anyone in the NAIA."

The Tigers, a team dominated by experienced upperclassmen, started on the road to Lewiston when they opened their season March 17th at Hanover College.

Coach Brian Baker said of the team, "With the experience we have, and if we can stay away from injuries, we have the potential to achieve our goals."

As the Tiger Baseball Team entered the 90's, they hoped to place the university's name at the top of the college baseball ranks. By Scott Wakely

Softball Team

Faces Challenging Year

The 1989-90 Lady Tiger Softball Team faced a challenging spring. Last year the Lady Tigers finished fourth in the NAIA District standing with a 27-11 record. This year, however, with only three returning players, and only one senior, they were a young squad.

Returning to the team as the lone senior, Brenda Miller, who played first base and outfield. Sophomores Sandra Lalone and Candace Lahr played again this year. Lahr made NAIA All-District third base as a freshman.

According to Head Coach Brenda Patterson, "It was a good recruiting year. We've gotten some good young ball players in, who have had good experience in high school."

Patterson said the team had three freshman pitchers and one transfer. Most of the pitching duties rested on Freshman Angie Joseph. According to Patterson, two other freshmen, Beth Schoenwetter and Dawn Whittington were good ball players who were versatile and added depth to the infield.

The Lady Tigers began their season during Spring Break in Fort Myers, Florida, at the First Annual Women's Fast Pitch Tournament. Most of the teams were from the East and from NAIA Divisions I, II, and III. The team began conditioning in November.

Year Of Surprises On The Green

The golf season this year could be called the "Year of Surprises." Many developments occurred, which led to early season disappointments and future successes.

The team was comprised of six players, of which only three returned from last year's team. Mark "Slice" Atkinson, Cary "Splash" Morrison, and Lance "Sharky" Delbridge, were joined by Rollie "Shank" Thill, Derek Ferris, and Mike Matthews.

The team opened the season at the Lewis Invitational playing against larger Southern schools and Midwestern states. Although the Tigers did not fare well in that tournament, they gained valuable experience.

With the loss of Atkinson, newcomer Rollie Thill stepped in and took over as the team leader. Although all five players performed well at times, it was Thill's consistent play throughout the season that helped the Tigers. His play earned him one of the five all-conference awards.

Playing in the Nine Team Chicagoland Collegiate Golf Conference, the Tigers ended the season in a tie for fourth place with Loyola University. Although the Tigers did not fare as well as they would have liked, they still had fun throughout the year and plan to work on their woods and irons in the off-season. By Lance Delbridge

At Your Leisure Intramurals

After a long afternoon cooped up in a library booth or lab corner, students yearn for mental and physical escape. The solution may be a couple hours of intramural games — good, clean competition.

The intramural program has improved each year, offering a variety of sports and table games. This year ping-pong was popular, along with Rook and sand volleyball.

Students could create their own teams and compete for better or worse. Not only could they join a team, but they could referee or organize tournaments.

During the fall, softball tournaments offered stiff afternoon competition. While volleyball and chess boards would fill up through the evening hours.

When winter came everyone moved indoors. Men's and women's basketball tournaments rolled non-stop late every evening. Who said work-outs had to be dull?

Spring brought high energy tennis matches — singles and doubles. No matter what the season, there were always intramurals — a breakaway.

Intramurals, continued

Senior Toni Sue McGuire, member of a sand volleyball team, said, "I figured intramurals would be a good study break, a great way to meet people, and it was a perfect arena to exhibit my volleyball prowess. Although the glory of the victories have long since faded away, the scars from my mosquito bites remain an ever present reminder."

Like Junior Tony Myers, many intramural athletes enjoyed sports they didn't get to play in high school. Myers said, "Now that I'm at Olivet, intramural football offered me the opportunity to play a sport I have always wanted to play."

Sophomore Erik Crew plays intramurals for different reasons. He said, "Ping pong brings out the animal in me. It is the essence of power, since I have total control over an object that can slam a ball nearly 100 miles an hour. Self-actualization in Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs is fully attainable by participating in this high intensity sport. Furthermore, the camaradery between the pongers is unique in itself." By Wendy Parsons and Melissa Baldwin

Cheerleaders Stimulate Team Pride

What are cheerleaders for anyway? Believe it or not, we did more than just yell "TOUCHDOWN" and throw candy to the fans. The most important part of our job was to support our Tiger football team. We arrived at the field forty-five minutes before game time, so we could be there to warm up when the guys did to show them we really cared. Before the games, we decorated the locker room to help the guys get pumped up. We did more than just cheer.

The 1989-1990 football cheerleading squad consisted of eight members: Tracy Hair (captain, sr.), Neely Nicholson (sr.), Jodi Donth (soph.), Michelle Hays (soph.), Marcy Johnson (soph.), Tricia Mastenbrook (soph.), Michelle Pasko (soph.), and Gladys Townsend (soph.). Neely, Michelle P., and Tracy were returning varsity cheerleaders, and the rest of us were rookies. We started practice the first week of school and worked every night so we'd be ready for the first game. Things came together quickly and we work well together as a squad for the short time we had been together.

Whether the game was home or away, or whether we won or lost, we all had a good time. We never gave up on our guys and we supported them with pride. As cheerleaders we took the games seriously but we always had fun. If you are a Tiger fan, you might remember us when you hear this, "F-I-G-H-T fight, Tigers, fight!" By Marcy Johnson

Clubs, organizations, groups — the fusing of single personalities through common effort and unity of purpose. Members retain their identities by contributing necessary individual elements in the interest of group welfare. Leaders recognize and understand these individual elements in order to know when to control or free them. Productive college clubs allow individuals to contribute freely without impairing group balance. At their origin, clubs soon discover their own formula for balance. Deviation from the formula encourages anarchy or tyranny, destroyers of unity and flexibility.

Government No More. . . Student Council

No longer identified by their traditional title, Associated Student Government forged new territory as Associated Student Council.

Each member this year worked in their respective organizations to offer students entertainment, newspapers, yearbooks, and spiritual guidance.

With the apathy prevalent on American campuses, what possessed this team of student leaders to dedicate hours each week improving university life?

Junior Class Representative Ethan Reedy said he was on council because

"... the students need a voice. ASC provides a way for me to be involved with the faculty and administration."

Dean Gebert, on the other hand, said, "I'm a Sophomore Class representative because I'm paying money to be here, and I want to make it as fun as possible. The only way to do that is to be where the action is." Sophomore Class President Wes Clark said, "I'm on a mission from God."

In September this year's band of 25 council members retreated to spend two days planning and meeting with administrative leaders. Gathered in a camp lodge in Lake Placid, Indiana, the council, led by Student Body President Pam Stouder, brainstormed, voiced opinions, shared goals, and pledged commitment to elevate campus activities and relations.

Dee Dee Hedrick, WRA President, said, "At the retreat I realized what the focus of ASC should be. We all share one thing, our Christian faith. No matter what we plan or do, that is always a part of it." By Michele Robbins

Freshman Council

Each year every class waits breathlessly to see the new freshman crop of people. This year was no exception, and the Freshman Class contained many new creative faces.

The Freshman Class Council personified the best of these new faces. These freshmen, despite initial misgivings or doubts, enjoyed being a vital part of the Student Council.

Tammy Stipe said, "I was nervous at first (about running for council), but I was impressed by the people. I like getting to know the council and how freshmen feel and think."

Other freshmen enjoyed participating in class meetings. Johann Zweifel said, "You can be really creative, work on a project, and see it happen. You learn from other classes to find and see what is going on."

Noelle Brown admitted the reason she ran for social committee was because, "...as a freshman coming in, I was nervous about meeting people. It was a way to feel more part."

Angie Sears said that the freshman goal for this year was to get all freshmen involved. She said, "I think we have wonderful potential, and we're working on great ideas." By Chery sophomore Class Council as a council that set out to make a difference. Their two major areas of interest were building school pride and obtaining spiritual growth.

Sophomore Council

The Sophomore Class sponsored the comeback of the school mascot, and to build spirit, the sophomore class participated in the annual CROP Walk. The students' dedication to helping others embodied the spirit and heart of the school.

In their first meeting of the year, the class president, Wes Clark, asked the members about their summers. In response, the members shared personal, spiritual experiences. Class Representative Tracy Spaulding said, "We focused on making Christ at the center of our lives. We rely not on our strength but on His." The members left shooting for a year of spiritual growth as a class.

As individuals, the council members felt they had,

as Tracy said, "a personal obligation to reach out to others," to be an example set before the campus and the community.

Some council members set personal goals. Class Chaplain, Scott Sherwood said he chose to "make Christ as much of a priority as anything else I do. I can't change the whole world, but, I can try to change my world by focusing on doing the 'little things' right." By Teresa O'Brien

Junior Council

Junior Class Council of 1991 was determined to cultivate diversity in our class by expanding our "inner circle" to include those who were less active in the past. This became the goal at the Junior Class Council retreat. As Laura Swinehart said, "We all expressed a need to get the class involved."

The council decided on several ways to achieve that goal. The first was to create committees for class members to help out with our projects. The Halloween party and the Junior/Senior Banquet along with devotionals, slide show, etc., provided juniors with a variety of opportunities to leave their mark on the year.

Another way the Junior Council encouraged participation was to strongly promote class activities to our own group of friends. As Heath LeGrand said, "Just putting up flyers isn't enough. We need to actively show concern — we want involvement." This strategy worked. Since each of us had a different set of "close friends," we reached more of our classmates.

On the whole, our junior year was a time when the class opened up. We became accustomed to different faces and tackled challenging events from a new angle. In the year of 1989-90, we succeeded in breaking down many of the walls that hid us from each other. By Ethan Reedy

Senior Council

Our mission was to refresh weary souls and energize to leave port. This year was one huge send-off party! The task of endless schooling was almost complete and as the seniors sailed through last few miles of their course, they needed people to celebrate with them along the way.

Senior Class Council were the celebration planners. This year's council marked every event with unique style and pizzazz.

This council has done more than simply plan and organize a class, but has carried out a dynamic expression of fun, love, and unity to its fellow members.

Linda Holcomb, senior social committee member, said, "It's fun in the planning of the activities to actually complete them in such a way that people feel they get the most out of them."

Eric Cummins, senior vice president, said, "I like being a part of the decision-making process that will be a part of our class history and future."

Marvin Adams, senior class representative, said, "Being a part of a class with brilliant potential for their future is one thing; to be their leaders is another. It is a position of fun, and frolic, a feeling of greatness! Their decisions will ring with them throughout their future years. Sail on!"

Resident Assistants On Call

12:00 a.m. — Lock the doors! Where's the person in 402? I climb the stairs to fourth floor and wake up her roommate. "Oh yea, she went home for the weekend, she must have forgotten to fill out a late pass."

1:00 a.m. — (Knock, knock, knock) "Sorry I'm late, my car broke down in Chicago."

2:00 a.m. — Oops! I didn't lock the doors correctly and the security guard sets the alarm — of course — (brother, is that thing loud — it woke up the Resident Director!)

3:00 a.m. — (Knock, knock, knock) "Could you let me out of the building? I need to go to the airport to pick up my friend who's flying in from Denver. Her plane comes in at 5:00 a.m."

4:00 a.m. — (Knock, knock, knock) "Jennifer passed out in the bathroom. She said she gave blood today and, oh yea, she hasn't eaten in a couple of days."

5:00 a.m. — (Knock, knock, knock) "Could you unlock the doors? I need to go out and run 10 miles for R.O.T.C."

6:00 a.m. — I wait for a knock on my door.

7:00 a.m. — Time to get ready for classes.

5:00 p.m. — "The girl in 322 needs a sick tray, could you get one for her?"

6:00 p.m. — "I try to study, but sleep looks much more exciting and necessary at this point."

7:00 p.m. — (Knock, knock, knock) "Jill's stereo is so loud, and I'm trying to study. Could you ask her to turn it down?"

8:00 p.m. — Time to sit desk! I take all of my books, but it's funny how none of them get opened! FOUR HOURS LATER!!

12:00 a.m. — Lock the doors. Where's the person in 403? I climb the stairs to fourth floor. . .

There are definitely some exciting times as a Resident Assistant. But to me, being an R.A. is a privilege and an honor.

It's much more than telling people their hair is too long or their skirts are too short. It's more than a job. It's being ready to serve and listen to people.

It's summed up best by this, "Instead, whoever wants to become great among you must be your servant, and whoever wants to be first must be slave to all. For even the Son of Man did not come to serve, but to serve, and to give his life as a ransom for many" (Mark 10).

WRA Hits The Radical Scene

For the Women's Residence Association's executive council, the 1989-90 year started as a challenge.

Their goal for WRA was to make it a year of change and improvement. "Making it Radical," WRA President Dee Dee Hedrick stated was the main theme. And radical it was.

An experimental activity tried by WRA this year was the Big Sister-Little Sister Program. Starting the program was a send off party at the warming house. After meeting each other the Freshmen Little Sisters and Big Sisters met throughout the year to share, support, fellowship, and fun times.

Melissa Frye said, "I enjoy having an added person in my life to share things with. It's neat to be able to help her with the things that she faces because of what I went through last year."

New romances were started at Sweetest Day and Twirp weekends. A new twist to the ordinary twirp date was reverse twirp. This was where a girl's roommate secretively set her up with a guy.

Jenny Glisson said of reverse twirp, "(I think) that it would be a lot of fun to plan a date for your roommate. It would be great for those girls who are too scared to ask someone out."

For those who refused to leave Olivet to go home and visit their lonely parents, WRA brought their families to them during Family Weekend February 2-4. The Talleys helped clear the way to a happy reunion between long-departed family members. Then they were able to spend a few days catching up on old times.

The WRA executive council and dorm representatives put their all into this year. It was a year that fulfilled the hope for a radical year. By Melissa Frye

MRA Provides Outlet

Men's Residence Association experienced a successful 1989-90 school year. Led by Kerry Hand and a "hard-working, sold-out-to God" council, the organization strove to give Olivet's guys a lot of fun and provide a purpose as well.

According to Tom Mathai, the Steven Curtis Chapman concert "started the year off right." There was a tremendous turnout and over 50 were helped spiritually.

Another MRA sponsored activity was the movie, "The Princess Bride." WRA and MRA co-sponsored family weekend, The Talleys, the three-on-three basketball tournament, and pep buses to varsity away games. The buses allowed students to take their school spirit, which was strong at the home games, on the road to encourage the Tigers.

"We (MRA) lift up the morale of students while enjoying Christian fellowship with each other. MRA has a Christian grasp on its attitude toward life which is desperately needed in today's world," Brian Garvin said.

MRA wasn't just an Olivet alternative to a fraternity. This year they provided some quality fun for the Olivet community and gave Olivet men a chance to interact with each other more.

Mathai added, "For me, it (MRA) was sort of an outlet...a time to hang out with the guys and be myself."

MRA worked this year to provide a context in which guys could learn that their spirituality is something to be proud of. By Nick Christoffersen

GlimmerGlass Updates Computer and Design

The GlimmerGlass is constantly changing and growing every year, and those changes reflect the strengths and styles of the staff which produces the students' newspaper.

This year was no exception. The GlimmerGlass improved on the surface in design quality, as well as behind the scenes with new equipment and ideas. "The staff has put out an even better paper this year. The reporting has been consistently strong, and the quality of the paper has also improved," said Prof. Joe Bentz, faculty advisor.

A staff of six editors and assistant editors devoted time to producing the bi-monthly paper. Thomas Hooppaw, news editor; Candy Nerman, sports editor; Debbie Hickman, features editor; and John Small, opinions editor, volunteered 20 hours or more each production week. Assistant editors Kenny Davis, sports, and Ann Dorsey, news, also put in their time.

"This year quality has become a priority," said Denise Roberts, executive editor. "The experience and skill of the staff members is reflected in the results each issue."

A restructured business office and new computer equipment helped the paper to improve in other areas as well. This year the business office divided Gary Jenkin took on the responsibilities of advertising manager, while Richard Rich worked as the newspaper's accountant. Jenkin and his staff of sales representatives made GlimmerGlass history by increasing the paper's advertising sales by almost $10,000 for the year.

"The improvements and changes in the newspaper are results of the hard work and dedication of a small group of people who want to make it the best paper possible," said Roberts. "I think the results speak for themselves." By Denise Roberts

Aurora Staff Captures Campus Alive

Buried in the lower cavities of Ludwig Center sat the Aurora Office where a huddled mass of students collected the memories of their peers for publication. The many wee wee hours spent chained to the computer or cropper proved a source of both pleasure and pain to this year's Aurora staff. As the staffers expended kilowatts of creative energy, they were left exhausted but fulfilled.

Editor Shelly Comstock cringed whenever the word "deadline" was mentioned. "I flourish when creating lay-outs and writing articles. I will even miss dreaming up captions, but I could do without the due dates. I like sleeping occasionally," Comstock said.

Compared to other campus clubs and organizations, the yearbook was one of the more time consuming projects. Several brave students chose to withstand the time and energy abuse and dedicated their talents to taking pictures, writing, cropping, and designing pages.

"I'm not sure what bothered me more, the lack of sleep or the total drain of creative energy from my body," said Assistant Editor Cheryl Harris. "But add another chocolate bar to my system, and I could go for hours."

Comstock rounded up a diverse staff of editors which included Marvin Adams, Seniors editor. Recalling the yearbook experience, Adams said, "It was the best of times. It was the worst of times. I wouldn't have traded it for the world." By Michele Robbins

Cultures Merge. . . Internationally

International Club, sponsored by Professor Lowell Malliett, directed their focus toward students interested in cultures other than their own. Club President Kim Quach said the organization provided a place where international students were accepted. "We want to make them feel at home."

Another member, Pamela Kimbui, said the club was "...a place where we met every two weeks and discussed activities."

According to Quach,

they were concerned about the student's adjustment to the campus culture. "We're interested in the members and how they are doing, or if they need a tutor."

This year's club kept their members busy with a variety of activities such as car washes, a late skate, a food drive, and a camping trip. Throughout the school year, the group also took weekend mission trips to different nearby states. By Michele Robbins

Wildlife Promotes Preservation

Wildlife Club consisted of students who are concerned about our environment and are willing to take action to protect it. There are two reasons members felt they need to take action.

First, Genesis 2:15 reads "The Lord God took the man and put him in the Garden of Eden to work it and take care of it." Man is charged to govern the earth responsibly.

Second, natural areas should be preserved for our own sake and future earth inhabitants. Recycling and proper disposal of waste will not only save natural areas but resources for generations.

The Wildlife Club collected aluminum, glass, and paper for recycling. The Club sponsored guest speakers, held seminars, and helped the community get involved by sponsoring a 5K run and a neighborhood clean-up on Earth Day 1990. The Club also sponsored field trips to the Brookfield Zoo, natural areas, and the Museum of Natural History. Terry Borrowman

Politically Aware

College Republicans was an organization dedicated to increasing the political awareness on campus. College Republicans wanted to show them otherwise.

Increasing a political awareness in a non-election year was quite a challenge. College Republicans attempted to do it by bringing various politicians to campus to speak to the group and by writing to keep students updated on current events.

They also exposed students to the state legislative process by taking them down to Springfield. The trip was sponsored by State Representative Jerry Weller.

By providing these opportunities, College Republicans felt they were preparing future leaders for both the Republican Party and the United States. One day ONU College Republican alumni may be filling the seats of Representatives and Senators in statehouses and Congress. By Ethan Reedy

Flight Instructions

Aviation Club was one of the newer clubs on campus. It was founded in January 1988 by Duane Romey who is currently club president.

The purpose of the club was to enlighten students about aviation and the its role in society.

Much time was committed to aviation history from the Wright Brothers to NASA. Students learned what it takes to become a pilot. Other activities demonstrated aircraft operations and air traffic safety.

Activities provided by the Aviation Club were not centered exclusively on airplanes. Ballooning, soaring, and even skydiving were popular topics.

The Club wanted to inspire its members and allow them to experience the feeling of flight, with its incomparable serenity. By Duane Romey

Treble Clef On Base

Treble Clef's main focus as a spiritual unit this year was the power of prayer. They believed that in order to reach out and effectively minister to others, they needed to first prepare their own hearts and minds.

Practice usually ends with prayer, a brief devotional, and a time of sharing. Lesley Howe said, "The spiritual aspect of Treble Clef is very important to me. Everyone was so supportive."

Melissa Matthyse said she remembered when they all stood in a circle, held hands, and prayed. "Knowing that I had God and the support of Treble Clef helped me tremendously," she said.

Many members accepted and enjoyed the challenge of learning a wide variety of music. The choir didn't only do contemporary music. They also did many educational pieces.

Although they only had a few tours, friendships developed which grew through the entire year. Heidi Winter said, "I had a feeling of complete openness when we shared our problems and triumphs." Through spiritual growth and increased use of musical talent, Treble Clef Choir became a fused unit for Christ. By Lisa Brenne and Melissa Matthyse

Campus Clubs

Open Door Policy

Most clubs typically allowed general student membership, but what distinguished them this year from many others was their "active" status. Yes, students could be "active" members of a club or organization.

As new clubs sprung up and old ones spruced up, officers and members filled the academic calendar with activities and fundraisers.

Created this year specifically to promote these activities, the "Blue Light Special" became a regular campus feature. Members of ASC would run random ticket give-aways for campus functions, giving the clubs free publicity. Student Council realized the importance of clubs as organizations especially designed to meet the needs of student groups.

Since ASC cannot appeal to the entire student body in many of its activities, the members turned the spotlight on the clubs as a means of reaching more students outside Olivet's mainstream.

It worked. As members of their respective clubs, students received more special treatment, more activities suited for their individual likes and dislikes. ASC sees this as a campus trend. Hopefully, more clubs will form for specific student groups, as the old ones continue to fashion their policies around their elite yet open memberships. By Michele Robbins

Improving Society

To improve the quality of life and the environment was just one goal set by Student Home Economics Association this year. The club, based in the Home Economics Department, sought also to serve families in society and to prepare its members professionally. "We are not just a group of stitchers and stirrers," said Club Officer Elisa Roberts.

The club catered to a diversity of majors, such as dietetics, foods and nutrition, fashion merchandising, interior design, family services, and child development.

This year SHEA sponsored an all female slumber party, two fashion shows, several guest lecturers, a shopping spree to Chicago, and an on-campus film. The club was most famous for its Homecoming style show organized by Club Officer Wendy Davis. "I enjoy doing big productions. It was fun planning the choreography and picking out the clothes," said Davis.

SHEA President Marci Meyering reflected on the her position saying, "Overall, I have a sense of accomplishment just seeing all the girls come together and have fun. We older members have an opportunity to be examples to the younger ones."

Circle K

Student Service

Circle K was a service club open to all students. As a branch of the Kiwanis Club, Circle K sponsored the Bloodmobile, aimed at college students who wished to donate blood.

Prof. Joe Bentz served as faculty advisor and worked jointly with the Kiwanis representative, Dr. William Foote, also a faculty member.

Susan Unger, Circle K's

president this year, joined the club because of her membership in Key Club — the high school equivalent to Kiwanis. Unger felt it natural to continue her community service by leading Olivet's Circle K.

After attracting new members on Club Day, Circle K sponsored several other activities during the fall and spring semesters.

ROTC

Leadership Opportunities

ROTC (Reserve Officer's Training Corps) was a college program which provided young men and women with an opportunity to obtain a commission as a Second Lieutenant in the U. S. Army.

Through a combination of college courses in military science, plus a rigorous summer training session, college students were taught the leadership and team-building skills necessary to be effective Army officers.

The program at ONU encompassed much more than proudly wearing a uniform. In fact, the ROTC cadet was mentally, as well as physically, challenged.

The ROTC cadet studied the fundamentals of military science with courses in military history, principles of leadership, organization and administration.

Physical training was also included in the curriculum. ONU cadets had physical training three days a week and one leadership lab a week. Through a combination of regular college courses and officer training, ROTC produced well-rounded individuals, as well as future leaders.

As the commanding cadet at ONU, Jeff Rowley found ROTC a challenging part of his Christian walk. "Not only did the Lord give me the benefit to serve Him, but do it as a leader in the United States Army," Rowley said.

Another cadet, Jeff Horsman, said, "I am learning about the military and its leadership. It teaches me responsibility and integrity." By Jeff Rowley

WONU Radio

Music-Intensive

Ahh, just when I thought my work in radio was done forever. After feeling "called" to become a pastor (many to this day still believe that God dialed the wrong number), I transferred to Olivet from Western Michigan University. It was shortly thereafter that I became involved at a sound of loud explosions, piercing lasers, drop-in (deep male voice) "W-O-N-U" (more explosions, piercing lasers).

Um, I'm sorry, where was I? The WONU "family" was a great group of students.

All of them strove to improve their skills while constantly being pushed by the station management to sound their very best. And I guess I was on staff to be the prime example of what not to do on WONU.

Actually, I considered myself an instructional aid to the less experienced broadcasting students. Just by listening to one of my Saturday night shows, they knew what to avoid should they ever wish to work on the FM station. For instance, playing The Lundstrom's Jamaican-style rendition of "In My Heart There Rings a Melody" once an hour is not advisable.

All of that aside, WONU's over-all sound was reaching the point where it rivaled commercial stations. Being "music-intensive" allowed the station to draw many listeners from the 20-plus counties it served.

The station should continue to move towards becoming one of the top college stations in the nation (even if they do keep me on-air). By Jeff Umbaugh

Campus Bands In Stadiums and On Stage

Olivet Pep Band formed an important part of the fan section at football and basketball games. Their lively music built enthusiasm and boosted ONU spirit.

Members appreciated the opportunity to "cut loose" and play with more freedom than was appropriate for concerts, and they took advantage of the chance to use their instruments to help cheer on the sports teams.

Band members enjoyed comradery as they endured a variety of weather through the football season — sunburns at the first few games and chills during the last one. Noisy crowds at the basketball games competed with the band, who could either play louder or join the screaming fans.

Unknown to the pep band at the beginning of the basketball season, there was a new rule: musical instruments could not be played while the ball was "live." For the first time in Olivet's 22 years of intercollegiate sports, the pep band received a technical foul for their spirit-building efforts.

Another branch of the band this year was Stage Band. Directed by Eric Penrod, this jazz ensemble entertained crowds at Kresge Auditorium. Unlike last year's Jazz Band, the group featured only instruments, without vocals. By Ann Dorsey and Michele Robbins

Instruments of Praise

Concert Band and Orchestra

"Instruments of Praise" has been the Concert Band's motto for many years. This attitude was significantly different from the competitive, cut-throat spirit most musicians have experienced in high school and college bands. This difference has been the root of one of Olivet's more rewarding organizations.

When band member Shelly Armstrong began band as a freshman, she had little indication of what satisfaction it would bring. Fall retreats with such themes as "Country Western" and "Jungle Safari," Christmas parties with gag gifts, pep band, and slide shows provided many fun-filled memories.

But there was more to this group of musicians. Through weekly devotionals, prayer partners, and worship concerts, Armstrong quickly learned that the motivating purposes behind the meetings and music was a common love for God and a desire to glorify him with instruments.

In her four years of school, the Concert Band has been a bright spot for Armstrong in the middle of stress and burn-out. The members have been a supporting and loving family.

Director of Concert Band Dr. Harlow Hopkins deserved the gratitude of the members for pouring his soul and character into not only the band but into each individual member. Hopkins constantly reminded his students that without Christ's love, their playing would only be "resounding gongs and clanging cymbals." His leadership set a positive spiritual tone for many years.

Hopkins also directed Olivet's orchestra. Since orchestra was not required of music majors, most of the musicians were in it just to play. Sophomore Nathan Degner said, "I joined, because I've been in orchestra all my life."

The college orchestra performed five times in conjunction with several professional musicians hired from the civic orchestra. This year they performed Beethoven's Symphony No. 1, Handel's Water Music, Handel's Messiah, and Mozart's Figaro.

Degner wished more students would have attended the performances, saying, "It would expand their horizon." By Shelly Armstrong and Michele Robbins

Orpheus: A Musical Heritage

Combine sixty-three voices, an outstanding director, three weekly practices, and "A Ministry in Music", and what do you have?

Orpheus Choir has played a key role in the musical heritage of Olivet for several decades. In the 1989-90 school year, the choir excelled even further.

The year began with a retreat at Aroma Park. This provided a chance for new members to get acquainted and helped the choir to achieve unity. In November, Orpheus represented ONU at Praise Gathering, an annual event at Indianapolis, Ind. hosted by Bill and Gloria Gaither. The choir also performed in Olivet's Homecoming celebration — 50 years at the campus's present location.

In January, during the last half of Christmas break, Orpheus set out for Washington, D.C., as a part of their annual tour. The choir sang in churches throughout Ohio, Virginia, and Washington, D.C., and spent several days sight-seeing at the nation's capitol. Members toured the National Cathedral, Capitol Hill, the Washington Monument, and the Lincoln Memorial.

Orpheus Choir meant different things to different members, but John Colegrove summed it up best by saying, "There have been many times the past years that Orpheus has been the only relaxing and sane part of my schedule. It's an exciting group to be a part of." By Marvin Adams

Vikings Bond In Brotherhood

Vikings Choir was a group of men who used their talents to praise God, but their most distinctive feature was their common bond. "Newcomers to the group can sense right off that we look out for one another," said Senior Paul Baker.

Sophomore Estuardo Mazin said, "We help each other spiritually. If we see that someone is down, we pray for the person. But it doesn't stop there. We continue to check up on that person, and make sure he's doing okay."

People outside Vikings easily recognized their closeness. Along with their bond in friendship, they also had a bond in Christ. The Vikings, under the direction of Prof. Joe Noble, saw their ministry as a way to reach people for Christ through music. Their motto "To Thee We Sing," summed up their primary motive. They wanted to give God the praise, and the best way to do that was through their music. By Lisa Brenner and Melissa Mathysse

Daily the individual is blasted with stimuli, triggering responses which determine his personality and condition. With each response, he shows his elements — physical, mental, and spiritual. Stress, absurdities, selfishness, and pride take people "out of their elements." Control is important, along with a scheduled survey and categorization of responses. By evaluating response, order is achieved without hampering spontaneity. For elements cannot react without sparks or spontaneous combustion. College experience, years packed with relationships, teaches the beauty of balanced relations through complementary and supplementary elements found in separate individuals.

Starting Out

A Step Into the Future

When they entered the iron gates, freshmen who came to Olivet left the security of not only family but the living room couch, real mashed potatoes, a clean bathtub, and clothes dryers that actually get the jeans dry. What sacrifice. And all for an education with a Christian purpose.

For the majority of freshmen the sacrifice pays off, for they finish four years full of the best memories. Of course, when they first trudged up the stairs to their new dorm rooms hauling too many clothes and too few bottles of extra strength pain reliever, freshmen hadn't a clue what they would confront during their first nine months of college.

They would witness or experience outrageous phone bills, dates with "knowledgeable" upperclassmen, and classroom prayer. These things alone enticed many to come back for three consecutive years.

Advice was hard to give Freshmen, since they experienced everything from friend changes to hair cuts. Each left their first year with their individual memories, the clean slate covered with words, pictures, and scratches. By Michele Robbins

New Reality

"We're Not in Kansas Anymore"

I thought it would be easy. I had dreamed of getting away, moving out of town, being on my own, doing what I wish, and leaving all the comforts of home. I took one last look at my room, walked out the door, and climbed into the car with all of my belongings.

Although I knew that there would still be restrictions, I thought about all the times I would be able to leave my room and not have to report where I was going, when I would be home, and who I was going with.

It didn't occur to me that I was alone until my parents were on their way back to Michigan and I was left in my room with half unpacked boxes lying everywhere. No fluffy carpet, big couch, color T.V., or waterbed was anywhere to be seen.

While I was sitting in my room, I realized I was free from more things than I thought. I had just "freed" myself from loving parents, a close family, and friends I had known throughout my entire childhood.

Although leaving home was something I had yearned for for five years, the disadvantages of leaving home never really "hit" me until I actually was here.

I grew up in the same house for 18 years. A great advantage of going to a school where you know almost no one, is the new start. No one knows your past, which enables you to start over and be the person you want to be. It's like starting another life.

Leaving home was a great experience, and a real stepping stone in my life. The feeling is best explained by Dorothy in the Wizard of Oz - "There's no place like home." By Stacey Lauderdale

New Freedom:

A Possiblity for a Clean Slate

Well, you're in college now. This is it. Everything's different. You've got freedom now. No parents to tell you what to do. Nobody forces you to get up in the morning, make your bed and go to classes.

For many people, expectations of college life are totally different from what they experience once they finally arrive at college. True, freshmen do have freedom. But with this new-found freedom comes several new-found responsibilities.

The students of the freshman class are different from those in high school. They aren't here only because their parents force them, or because it's the law. They want the chance to learn more, grow mentally and emotionally, and prepare for their life.

Many students have regrets about their high school years. They failed to study. Whatever the case, college offers a great chance to begin again, to wipe the slate clean, and to rewrite that latest chapter of life.

The possibilities are endless. Surrounded by new faces, new places, new ideas, new standards, there is the chance to begin a new reputation, new relationships, new attitudes, and new beliefs.

The freedom of choice is, perhaps, the most important aspect of freedom offered by college life. By Stacey Lauderdale

Sweet Home

Dorm Life is Not Exactly Mom's

In at 8:00 and to bed by 10:00. Nice quiet nights asleep, then awaking at 8:00 to a quick start breakfast by cooking it in the microwave. Sitting on your bed, you reach into the refrigerator and grab a cold glass of fresh orange juice.

This may seem like an ordinary day in every household, but it was only a dream while staying in Chapman Hall. The nights were noisy, and the sleep was short. The homework was time consuming, and when there wasn't any homework, freshmen had to fight to find something to do.

The night life, especially in Chapman, was worth staying up for. The fun was staying up nights with friends, playing games, and talking and getting to know each other better. One freshman girl said, "You have to have one of the most exciting dorm lives that I know of."

The freshmen men have discovered that dorm life is as much fun as they could make it.

The best thing about dorm life was the possibilities for lasting friendships which could be acquired while staying there. True friends that seemed hard to come by were found. Best friends cried, laughed, and fought, but always kept the love and respect evident between them. By Matt Lee

Sophomore Class:

Time Well Spent

A normal yearbook description of our class would have been neither interesting nor accurate.

We were more than just "the exciting and diversified sophomore class." We were life, and nothing less than a masterful creation of literature would have done this group justice.

To anyone other than a sophomore, this would seem a bit proud, but it was the truth. We existed more than just on these few pages. We shared joy, sorrow, victory, and pain.

We strove to make a difference, to leave our mark, and to make a change for the better.

No matter what the task, we strove to do the job right and to do it big.

As a result, we set our goal high this year. Not only did we intend to have a good time, but we also intended to help those around us.

Last year, our class worked on community projects to help the needy. We continued to work in community programs this year with the emphasis being the Christmas season.

One of our council's most important goals was spiritual growth. If nothing else was accomplished in our class, we wanted to glorify the King.

I have always said that time well spent is time well spent. By C. Wesley Clark, Jr.

Forever Friends

Care While it Counts

Everyone at Olivet at one point or another has had friends that have touched their lives in some way.

Each friend fulfilled a certain need in a sophomore's life. Some were good to talk to, some inspired laughter, and some shared common interests. It was important to remember that friends played a major role in everyday lives.

Sophomores all related with the freshmen with memories of their freshman year. It was at this time that the sophomores were the people wandering around campus staring into thin air wondering what this college life was all about.

It was then that they discovered the importance of friendships — every friend helped carve out a special niche in Olivet life.

In a year or two, Olivet will only be a memory to sophomores. As they go their separate ways to fulfill their life's mission, many kept in mind that they will never meet again.

The sophomore goal was to every friendship count

The Dating Scene

A Word to the Wise

Dating is, quite naturally, THE activity at Olivet. Men fear asking for dates. They must suffer the humiliation of being turned down. Women fear being asked for dates. They must suffer the humiliation of turning men down. But despite these nearly overwhelming, often irrational fears, everyone wants to date.

Having made it through the perilous stage of dating and having reached that longed for state of engagement, I want to offer some advice on the subject of Olivet dating.

First of all, I firmly believe that students should not date during their freshman year — that I did so is beside the point. Studies are important, and freshmen need to use their freshman year to adjust to academics.

Secondly, students certainly must not get serious until their junior year and absolutely must not get engaged until at least their senior year. Again, that I got serious towards the end of my freshman year and engaged my sophomore year is completely irrelevant.

Finally, students must, under no circumstance, get married until after graduation. Just ignore the fact that I'm getting married before graduation.

In conclusion, ignore as I do and do as I say. By Leroy Hathaway.

Break Out

For the Weekend

One of the most important times in the survival of a student at Olivet was their weekends!

Weekends provided a "get away" from the schedule of classes and study. As sophomores, we perfected the art of weekendening. We knew where to go and what to do.

On Friday the fun began. Classes were over and we didn't want to study. Some students chose to exit campus for various reasons: a trip to Chicago, or a trip home.

Doug Hanner said that one of his visits home was the best weekend he had ever had. He was able to spend "quality time with my family, worked on the farm and cut wood. The best part was going on a hayride with my girlfriend Trina."

For those who couldn't get away from the campus there were various activities planned. Stacy Silcox said, "If we're lucky, there will be a film on campus to take up most of the evening. I then will usually find some of my friends and play Rook or ping-pong in the Red Room."

Saturday mornings were meant for crashing. Or for the sophomore bogged down with homework, a date with the library. Sophomores, no longer as irresponsible as in their previous year, used weekends to catch up on the heavier load of homework.

Saturdays also contained sports. Scott Brower said that his favorite weekend was spent at a tournament in Grand Rapids. Although he was representing the school, he said that it was good to get away from it.

Sundays contained church, unpacking (if you had gone somewhere), and frantically finishing homework that was due in the morning. By Teresa O'Brien

10 Reasons Why Sophomores Are So Uptight

1. Professors now know who they are and where to find them.
2. Freshman frequent dating life is over.
3. Upperclassmen still don't respect them.
4. Girls are trying even harder not to gain back the "Freshmen Fifteen."
5. It is now necessary to choose a major.
6. Most still don't have cars.
7. Horrified parents have already received four sets of grades.
8. Guys still have to take community showers.
9. This year they have to pay part of the school bill.
10. They know too much.

Juniors Get Ready

For the Best Year Yet

At the end of last year, the phrase "Class of '91 — We're almost done" was coined. Although we might be half-way finished with our schooling, we are not yet half-way finished with our goals as a class. At the beginning of this year, I set out to stand back and see our class as others saw it. This is what I saw and heard.

During Ollies Follies, the Junior Class pulled together and won one event after another. "Juniors, Juniors, Juniors!" the class chanted.

Shelly Wiersma responded, "Some people commented to us at Ollies Follies that they really admired our class because we didn't seem so 'cliquey' as others and we were willing to mix."

The Class of '91 is also a class with goals. "I would like to see our class get on fire for serving Jesus," said Spiritual Life Vice President Chris Jones.

On September 29th, the Junior Class Council got together and set a few goals of their own. The basic theme of their goals was to increase class involvement and to integrate the "nonvisible" part of our class.

"Our class has so much untapped talent — talent that has not yet been discovered," said Cindy Langdon. One way of accomplishing this goal was a class retreat. This gave our class the chance to break down barriers and establish new friendships.

The council established these goals in hopes of building relationships that will be meaningful to the individuals involved and beneficial to the class at large. By Sherri Fortado

Working for a Living

The Eternal Struggle for Pocket Change

"Hmmm . . . Does 456.321478 come before or after 456.321488?" This was just one example of the many decisions that had to be made by Olivet librarians daily.

Librarians were just one of the many jobs that Olivet students could hold. When considering the fact that three-fourths of the Olivet student body worked, one realized that many occupational decisions were made daily by many students.

What were the numerous jobs that an Olivet student could hold? One could be a line runner, cook, beverage runner, server in Marriott Food Service, a librarian, a teacher's aide in any of the different departments of the academic world, or an information guide (a.k.a. desk sitter) in Ludwig Center. One could try their hand at janitorial work in the dormitories or assist one of the coaches.

There were also a number of jobs off campus one could try. For instance, one could be a burger slinger at any of the fast food restaurants in town, work at the grocery stores in town, or work at any of the other normal jobs. Then there were the jobs like collecting air samples in buildings where asbestos has just been removed or selling cars.

Why did students work? Money. They needed money for the school bill, the car, the phone, the dates, the food (when Marriott's is not appetizing), and the chapel fines. By Todd Greathouse

Procrastination

Everybody Is Doing It

At Olivet, studying was more than boredom but less than entertainment. Many classes were interesting enough to attend but, in the rush of intimate romances, ping-pong matches, and real food safaris, students often somehow can't find enough time for serious studies on their own.

This problem was epidemic on the Olivet campus and, more often than not, a wonderful game for those of us who liked a challenge. The trick was to find out exactly how long one could procrastinate and still receive the desired score.

Procrastination itself became an art with many students. New students to the Olivet community noticed a decidedly high percentage of "old timers," who wait unbelievable amounts of time before completing assignments and studying for exams. To adapt, the new students began attempting daring feats of procrastination on their own.

The basic theory of procrastination is as follows: Procrastination is not absolute but relative; therefore, if one is absolutely sure he doesn't have enough time left to study he is a relatively uncreative person and has yet to realize that an already tasteless meal will become no less interesting if consumed in under five minutes. Live long and procrastinate. By Troy Stoneking

Waiting It Out

Juniors Begin Countdown

After two years of experience, it would seem that our junior year of college would have been a little less stressful, but was it? This was a year of waiting and preparation; grad checks, upper-level classes, and wondering about next year.

Leonard Alvera described his junior year as "a year of big decisions." Seniors were in their final year of preparation before entering "life." As Juniors, we were in a time of waiting. We still had one more year, and all the classes to take in that time.

Alvera also mentioned that as a religion major, he had to face some new questions about his spiritual life. Our junior year was a year of spiritual decisions also. We decided when we left home whether we were going to be faithful to the Lord.

The question, "What does God really want from me after graduation?" was even more pressing. The phrase, "search for God's will in your life," can be a little deceiving. God does not try to hide His will for your life. This advice was especially helpful to us, as juniors, when these questions started dominating our thoughts.

As I talked to various juniors about their year, most students mentioned preparation for next year and for life.

Stephanie Grant admitted that this year had been more stressful for her, wondering if she was in the right major and wondering where she would live after graduation. But she also said this year has been a good one for her. She said there seemed to be more comradery this year with graduating friends.

Grant said, "I have been able to develop stronger friendships this year. It's a serious year, but it's more fun too."

As we were in this time of waiting and preparation, it was comforting to know that we attended a school that stressed, "education with a Christian purpose." This was a time to use our Christian education and prepare for the future by making wise decisions. By Ron Hurt

On Changing Waves

*"Society is a wave. The wave moves onward, but the water of which it is composed does not."
-Emerson*

As a wave moves out to sea, it creates life by changing its environment. What is its purpose? In order for new life to be created and older life to be sustained, the current keeps life in a constant state of motion. Nothing remains the same — new refreshing waters flow in. Without this process, stagnation would occur, and life would cease.

Waves come and go — gathering elements in their path. Though the function of the waves is uniform, each carries its individual elements to sea providing for a balanced society. Even the beach, with crashing waves of varied forces and unequalled rhythms, changes. With every second a new pattern is created. The waves keep moving forward — carrying a part of the coast with them, leaving the coast feeling somewhat saddened by its loss.

As the Class of 1990 moves forward from ONU's "societal wave" to the next, we invite each of its members to re-examine their purpose, ideals, and values. With a healthy Christian vision, we can change any environment by flowing together. We must never drift, for by doing so the identity of the individual is lost.

As we go forth, we carry with us the elements of our personalities (mental, physical, emotional, and spiritual) acquired over our college career. Yet, we leave behind something priceless — our wave of thought to inspire and ignite a spirit of unity for those that come behind us. By Marvin Adams and Stephen T. Sykes

On Individuality and Unity

Fusing Senior character — a blend of unity, yet distinctness. It represents a coming together of all areas in the student's life.

"What was funny (about our freshman year) is that ...they didn't think we were freshmen. There was a maturity (there) that wasn't typical for freshmen," Steve Greenlee said.

One characteristic of the Senior Class was the talent that the seniors contained in their natural leaders.

Derek Mitchell said, "The natural leaders (not necessarily the elected ones) really care about people and aren't caught up in trying to impress people."

Steve Sykes agreed that a basic bond was not only the class leadership and charisma, but also a sense of class unity.

"Our class is composed of unique individuals with some strong personalities. However, the individualism (that we share) doesn't hinder (our) willingness to act as a group," he said.

Shelly Armstrong believed that the Class of 1990 had the power of acceptance. She said, "We never have had a certain group that was more accepted, envied, or more exclusive. Everyone has been able to find a spot where they belong in our class."

In short, the Senior Class had a vibrancy and self-confidence that few classes can match. By Cheryl Harris

On Meeting Needs

What is synonymous with college life? Relationships! Looking back, remembering the smashed faces in cloudy pictures. Who were they, and what were they doing? (A fleeting moment of insanity?)

Many forget the faces of the past — the gang, the hangouts, the jargon. However, the Class of 1990 is out to change past experience.

Each relationship (insane, intense, incredible) evolved around a special group of friends, but not a "particular" set of friends.

Beneath the surface, individual relationships took shape: Undying cohorts, boyfriend-girlfriend, spiritual partners, confidantes, and acquaintances.

For the Class of 1990, diverse relationships were important, in that they met the varied needs of the individual. Their relationships reflected the whole person — a state of well-roundedness.

Christ calls us to fellowship with one another, to love and serve. It is through Him that the Senior Class relationships proved unequalled. Dan Bright summed up the view on relationships, "I feel the relationships that exist here are of a higher quality and have helped me a great deal in my relationship with Christ." By Marvin Adams

On Looking To The Stars

In the 1968 film, 2001: A Space Odyssey, Arthur C. Clarke and Stanley Kubrick painted a picture of the future with such striking images as interplanetary travel and extraterrestrial contact. While the Class of 1990 might not have been looking to the stars, it realized that 2001 was just around the corner, and some seniors already had made plans.

For instance, Melinda Harris had her sights set abroad. She said, "I'm going to be working for the government in foreign affairs (by) representing the United States in Japan."

Other seniors were looking a little closer to home. Debbie Straw stated, "I'm going to be a suburban homemaker. I'll be married with a couple of kids. I'll be active in church work, such as children's church, quizzing, and Caravans."

The Class of 1990 looked to its future in the 21st Century with confidence and optimism. While some had trouble looking past graduation, most seniors were already setting goals for the rest of their lives.

Most of these plans were down to earth, but who knows? As the year 2001 approaches, some of the Senior Class may indeed look to the stars. By Stephen T. Sykes

On Walking The Fine Line

Balance is that tight rope which draws a fine line between sanity and psychosis. As a college senior, you walk that rope daily (where many fall off into the psychotic realm). By this point in our academic careers, we are to have some lessons down pat.

One of those lessons is finding a balance between books and play. Demanding careers blatantly stare at us, shouting

"ready or not, here I come." Yet, another voice cheers for the side of fun and craziness.

Janice Rich and Angie Cutright agreed that "stressing the importance of academics is far under-rated in the present day world. We both are speaking from heart-felt experience, of course."

Derek Mitchell stated, "Balance is found in this unique combination. I find it by making my academic life social, and my social life academic."

What's the secret? Who knows! Though some may never stay balanced on the rope, where they may fall might not be so bad after all.

On Getting Out Alive

Want to know how to survive college? Ask the ones with the most experience — the seniors. Here's some of their advice on how to make it to graduation.

"Be flexible," said Alora Deising, and Toni Clark added, "Learn how to handle stress." College is nerve-racking at times, and if you want to remain sane, you'd better learn to deal with the little things, as well as major disappointments. Otherwise, you can take Eddie Adams' tip, "Take lots of caffeine and prepare to enter a nursing home after graduation."

"Learn to take one day at a time," said Bob Miller, "and remember your focus and your purpose through all times — the good and the bad." Gary Jenkin advised, "Balance your time, not just for work (because) you need to have fun. Don't bury your head in the books."

For juniors in particular, Tamala Hanner said, "Get a grad check NOW!" Another senior, who wished to remain anonymous and (who) found herself five hours short for graduation, said "Get out now!"

Some seniors focused on the social aspect of surviving college. Stacy Chapman, "Don't expect a date," while Jill Bailey advised, "Friends are friends and your roommate is your roommate," meaning have other friends also.

Other bits of advice were for college life in general. Ron Williams said, "Eat three meals a day and take all the skips you can." Shelly Comstock said, "Just say No," and Jill Bailey advised that when packing for college, "Do leave home without it — leave half of everything (you think you need) at home."

There are many tips someone could give on how to survive the various aspects of college, but the key is finding your own way and own determination to reach your goal. Stephen Sykes summed up his philosophy with a simple statement: "Stay in your room and avoid sharp objects." By Teri Cline

In Douglas Adams' science-fiction novel, So Long and Thanks for All the Fish, the world is destroyed. However, not before all the world's dolphins escape, leaving behind a message of gratitude: "So long, and thanks for all the fish." While we don't anticipate the destruction of Olivet, the senior class would like to thank ONU for four wonderful years. In our stay here, we learned to build relationships, balance our academic and social lives, strengthen our character, and most importantly, survive. Above all, we learned to place Christ at the center of our lives. Olivet fed us as surely as the dolphins in Douglas Adams' novel were fed. For that, we will always be thankful. So Long. . . # Administration

Stressing Accessibility

At the ASC retreat in September, student leaders challenged members of the administration to become more accessible. The administrative team met the challenge. Students could often see Dr. Parrott, Dean Brooks, Mr. Doug Perry, or Dr. Streit visiting with students over Marriott meals. Derek Mitchell expressed, "It wasn't uncommon to see at least one administrator in the cafeteria during a meal time." Over the course of the year students became more familiar with these administrative leaders and their families.

Dean Brooks especially advertised an open door policy by encouraging students to stop by his office to ask questions about policy. The administrative team also agreed to participate in several student forums this year. There they addressed issues important to student life, such as library hours, academic policies, faculty-student morale, finances, and dorm regulations. Nick Christopherson expressed, "I thought the forums this year were a positive step toward an open atmosphere of communication." Open relationship continued to pave the way for a more positive environment for all concerned. By Michelle Robins

Board of Trustees

Deciding the Future

Olivet's Board of Trustees met the first week in October and the week after graduation in May to set policies, approve operating budgets for the school, and approve plans for new buildings such as the Convocation/Athletic Center.

President Leslie Parrott reported to the board the recommendations, which he and the Administrative Team prepared. Members of the board met in several committees to consider plans, which were then voted on by the entire board.

The committees included Academic Affairs, Development, Finances, Student Services, Buildings and Property, and the Executive Committee.

The board members were nominated by each of the eleven districts of the Church of the Nazarene in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, and Wisconsin. They included the eleven district superintendents, and an equal number of pastors and laymen representing each district. The Alumni Association was represented by the president, one layman, and one minister. By Gordon Wickersham

Fighting For Freedom

Year of the People

Not since 1968 has a year been so politically and historically exciting. Nineteen eighty-nine carried buzz words like perestroika, Tiananmen Square, and drug wars. It seemed governments and civil leaders wanted to get everything done before the decade was over.

The wave of conflict and freedom began early in the 80s and exploded to the surface this year.

Nationally, 1989 began with George Bush's inauguration. After President Bush moved into the White House with his wife, Barbara, he managed to overcome the stigma of hesitancy which had plagued his vice-presidency. Starting with the urban drug wars and culminating in the invasion of Panama, Bush kept an active domestic and foreign policy.

Besides a new president, America had to think about environmental waste, cholesterol, flag burning, earthquakes, and gang violence. Continued on page 262

Current Events, continued

In world affairs, there was never a dull moment. Soviets continued to break stereotypes by becoming more educated and informed. As Gorbachev implemented his socio-economic program of perestroika, Soviets matured politically and on March 26 elected a new 2,250-member congress. Although Gorbachev had begun positive communist reform, the decade ended with race and minority riots throughout the Soviet Union.

One of the first countries to test Soviet reform was Poland. In August the Solidarity Movement formed its own political party and won the majority of seats in Poland's new Senate.

Chinese students also fought status quo by holding demonstrations in Tiananmen Square, Beijing last spring. The demonstrators wanted democracy so badly they starved for it. Soon after the students erected a Chinese version of the Statue of Liberty, labeled the "Goddess of Democracy." Communist leader Deng Xiaoping ordered 1,000 demonstrators killed. The military stifled the resistance.

While Gorbachev introduced Soviet reform, Hungary took advantage of the governmental confusion to loosen the grip of communism. Revisionists scheduled free elections of opposition political parties and tore down the wire fence bordering Austria.

East Germans began flooding into Hungary. The surge toward freedom was so great that when East Berlin's government attempted to halt all travel, people began marching and demonstrating until on November 9 the Berlin wall came tumbling down.

Inspired by the Chinese, students in Czechoslovakia took up the fight, followed by their neighbors in Bulgaria. Finally, the Romanians picked up the torch. Late December, Romanian revolutionaries assassinated the ruthless dictator Nicolae Ceausescu.

These events have left political and historical scholars breathless. But not even they can predict what will happen in the 90s. By Shelly Comstock and Greg Watson

Thank You. . .

Area merchants and regional churches have funded many pages in this book by advertising. The yearbook staff thanks these organizations for their contributions and encourages students, staff members, and friends of Olivet to continue their patronage. The campus has been located in Kankakee for 50 years, continuing to improve its image in the community. Not only do students frequent the restaurants and stores, but they often work in these establishments during their years on campus. As the surrounding neighborhoods expand by adding shopping centers and housing developments, Olivet also expands by building a convocation center. All work together to upgrade community and university life.

Editor Or Vampire?

It is common knowledge that yearbook editors rarely sleep, but people still insist on hanging garlic over my office door. I stand accused — but not alone. If you want to run blood checks, here are two more names — Marvin Adams and Cheryl Harris. This was Olivet's first yearbook totally on computer and that is where we three spent most of our senior year — in front of the computer. But Marvin and Cheryl already know I would have been incarcerated if not for their 24 hour assistance.

So I mention my loyal staff who brought in articles and pictures, and those who stayed at our beck-and-call. And I would be evil if I didn't thank the friends, family, and lovers who braved our pale faces and raspy voices to support us with words, back massages, music, pizza, and phone calls. You guys were too good.

To all those who were in any way insulted by us, our vampire tactics, or the yearbook — I quote Douglas Adams once again, "Sorry for the inconvenience."

Remember When You Leave...

“I want out of here!” cries the Senior Class. They will be out of here but not without a few memories. College memories leave vivid images easily induced through letters, pictures, favorite songs, and the yearbook. Don’t leave the dorm without them.

You can’t take the beds, showers, turkey cutlets, professors, and friends with you. But you can’t forget them. And one more thing. Please don’t make these the best years of your life — you have at least 45 more to go. Give yourself a break.

COLOPHON

This 1990 Aurora, Volume LXXVII, was created and produced by four editors, with the assistance of assistant photographers and staff members.

Taylor Publishing Company of Dallas, Texas, printed 1,650 copies of this 320-page book, while Varden Portrait Studios of Rochester, New York, processed the individual portraits.

Donna Arrington served as the area Taylor representative, and Mary Kay Tandoi served as the Varden representative.

Editors chose a lithocote cover processed in four-color stamped with silver foil. The paper stock is 80 pound enamel, and the body type face is Avant Garde Standard.

After meeting the four deadlines, the staff distributed these books in April 1990.

Shelly Comstock led the editing staff comprised of Marvin Adams (Seniors Editor) and Cheryl Harris (Social Life Editor). Jeff Keys was responsible for photo-taking and developing, and Matt Brown took care of the money. Certain other members of the student body helped considerably.

Gordon Wickersham advised the editing and photography staff throughout the production process.
